SUICIDE SENDS "SPIRIT MESSAGE"

AUTHORITY FOR LOANS DOUBTED BY M'ADOO

Asked Congress to Broaden His Powers, but Request Met Defeat

Washington, Feb. 14.—So convinced was William G. McAdoo that he had not the smallest authority to make further loans to European governments without special authorization by Congress when he was Secretary of the Treasury that he personally drew up a provision in the Fifth Liberty Loan Act, giving himself what he described as "broad powers" in making such loans.

Mr. McAdoo appeared in person before the House Ways and Means Committee at secret sessions and tried to persuade its members to report the measure favorably. Later Carter Glass, who succeeded Mr. McAdoo, also appeared before the committee and advocated that the powers of the Treasury Department be extended.

The proposed provision was unanimously rejected by the committee which felt that the United States had already advanced more than enough money to the bankrupt nations who are now endeavoring to repudiate their debts.

These facts have just been revealed in the official transcript of the testimony given by Mr. Glass and Mr. McAdoo.

BILLS NOW COMING IN.

The attitude of the Treasury Department toward the action brought by Mr. Hearst to restrain it from making further loans to European governments became apparent today.

One high official said that the bills these loans are intended to liquidate are now coming in, and that the Treasury will endeavor to make further advances to meet them.

When they appeared before the secret meetings of the House committee Mr. McAdoo and Mr. Glass vigorously defended the policy of continuing loans on the ground that it was necessary to prevent the collapse of European finances and the destruction of American foreign trade. Mr. McAdoo testified:

"It seems to me that part of prudence and wisdom, as well as enlightened self-interest to make the balance of the existing appropriations for the purchase of foreign obligations available for purposes growing out of war needs.

THOUGHT ALLIES WOULD PAY.

"This includes the supplying of foodstuffs and materials to such extent as may be necessary to tide allied countries over, to aid in the reconstruction of the devastated areas in Belgium, northern France, Italy and elsewhere, and generally to assist in restoring the economic life of those allied countries.

"It is impossible to determine the amount of aid which may be desired until full investigation has been made.

"The amount available under ex-

These are the questions which people in Ireland

STEAMSHIP IN ICE PACK CALLS HELP

New York, Feb. 14.—Two wireless messages were received today from the captain of the steamship Bristol City, boundound to this city. The first message was garbled in transmission, but the second "S. It is believed the ship was caught in a heavy ice floe somewhere off Cape Breton.

Boston American Is Thanked by Irish

Fellow Delegates: I would like to express my thanks and yours to the Boston American for the splendid services that newspaper has and is rendering to the Irish cause. I wish to thank the management of that paper for the wonderful support it has rendered to our organization, the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, the past two months in our membership drive. Osteopath Saves Life of "Talking Girl"

By International News Service.

Waukegan, Ill., Feb. 14.—Miriam Rubin, the eight-year-old "talking girl," who chattered and babbled almost continuously for more than 212 hours, is improving today and physicians believe she is about cured of her strange malady.

Recurrent attacks are expected, physicians said, but it is believed that a treatment has been found that eventually will effect a cure.

After every form of sedative known to leading physicians and neurologists of Waukegan and Chicago had been administered without result, Dr. Paul Berger, an osteopath of Waukegan, was called in.

Dr. Berger's examination revealed that the vertebrae in the child's spine had become dislocated and one of them was pinching the nerves that control the organs of speech.

Dr. Berger exerted pressure on the girl's spine and the vertebrae snapped back in place. Soon after Miriam dropped off to sleep and slept more than an hour. After awakening she started talking again but soon fell off into another slumber.

Although she still talks incoherently at intervals when awake the girl's fever is receding and the nervous tension she has experienced for more than nine days has relaxed. Physicians reported today that her condition was rapidly approaching normal.

BRADFORD HEARD BY DETROIT MEDIUM

Man Who Ended Life to Solve Mystery of the Beyond Tells Experiences

Copyright, 1921, by the International News Service.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 14.—Out of the great beyond a message has come from the spirit of Thomas Lynn Bradford.

It was received Saturday night between 9 and 10 o'clock, to the hour, after Professor Bradford committed suicide so he could prove the dead could communicate with the living.

It came to Mrs. Starkweather Doran, the woman the adventurer had chosen as the human agency through whom to talk with the world.

"I am Professor Flynn (Thomas Lynn Bradford), who speaks to you from the beyond," Mrs. Doran's message reads. "I have broken through the veil with the aid of the many interested persons who are helping tonight to prove the reality of communication from the regions beyond the earth. The help of the living has greatly assisted the return.

"NO GREAT CHANGE."

"I simply went to sleep," the message said. "I woke up and at first did not realize I had passed on. I find no great change apparent. I expected things to be much different. They are not. Human forms are retained in outline, but not the physical.

"I am still intent that students shall investigate the book I left behind.

"I have not traveled far. I am still much in the darkness. I see many persons. They appear natural.

"I recognize your fear and grief over the notoriety that this adventure has given you, but I am to help you bear it. Do not bother about it.

"FULL OF RAPTURE."

"There is a lightness of responsibility here, unlike in life. One feels full of rapture and happiness. Persons of like natures associate. I am associated with other investigators like myself. I do not repent my act. I was a misfit on earth. I shall continue—am continuing—my investigations.

"My present life is but the first of a series. I am still investigating the future planes regarding which we in this plane are as ignorant as are earthly beings of the life just beyond human life."

DEFIANT

REV. STEPHEN H. ROBLIN.

Rev. Dr. Stephen H. Roblin, minister of the Second Society of Universalists, declared in a sermon in the Fenway Theatre that he would keep up his fight against the attempt to revoke the society's charter and turn about $800,000 worth of real estate over to receivers.

A bill seeking these objects was recently supported at a legislative hearing by representatives of the General Universalist Convention and the Massachusetts Universalist Convention.

"The Second Society was in existence forty years before the State and General Conventions," said Dr. Roblin defiantly. "We could get together and turn them both out of the association."

Reading from the Universalist publication, the Leader, he said its report of the legislative hearing on the question of revoking the society's charter was prejudiced and untrue.

"I know the parish to be in the right," said Dr. Roblin, "and as long as there is a fight on I am going to be here."

He added that even if the bill now before the Legislature became law the courts would upset it and vindicate the Second Society.

NINE GARMENT PICKETS ARE ARRESTED

They were taken into custody by Sergeant Archibald Campbell and officers from Station 2. They gave their names as Michael Taylol, Alexander P. Klameroski, Jacob Shapray, Harry Hurvitz, E. Someluk, Louis Lyman, August Duzevitz, Leon Antinas and N. Raskails.

5 BANDITS SHOOT AT CLERK AND OFFICER

Frightened by Mansfield Fire Alarm They Dash Away Without Booty

Mansfield, Feb. 14.—An unsuccessful attempt was made today by five armed automobile bandits to rob the Mansfield Co-operative Bank.

They held up a bank official and employes at the point of revolvers, fired one shot, but escaped without stealing anything. They became frightened by the ringing of the town's fire alarm.

Five men were arrested a half an hour later, while going through Pawtucket. The police are holding them for identification.

The men came here in a seven-passenger black touring car carrying a Rhode Island registration plate, No. 10693.

Two of the robbers entered the bank and asked for the change of a five-dollar bill. Herbert E. King, the treasurer, was handing them the change when two of the others stepped into the bank and with revolvers drawn ordered the three employes to throw up their hands.

King and Mrs. William McLeod, the stenographer, obeyed. Charles M. Crane, a clerk, dropped to the floor and crawled on his hands unseen to a rear door. He got through the door and one of the robbers, seeing him, fired a shot. The bullet went wild.

Crane shouted for help. Oscar Brunell, a young man, noticing the men go into the bank, had become suspicious. He telephoned the police, and six members of the department, two armed with shotguns, had started for the bank before the men had been inside thirty seconds.

Someone in the excitement rang in the fire alarm. The ringing of the bells frightened the bandits and they ran into the street and, jumping into the car, drove toward Norton.

The police in automobiles gave chase. Other cities and towns nearby were notified to be on the lookout for the large car.

At Attleboro, eight miles away, Patrolman John Boro and another officer went into the square to await the car. They had not been there long when the automobile came through the city at a terrific rate. One man in the tonneau was standing up holding to the side of the car. He was waving a revolver.

Boro ran into the street and attempted to stop the car. The armed

IRISH CONVENTION MAKES APPEAL FOR 'AMERICANISM'

FULL RECOGNITION FOR ERIN DEMANDED BY A. A. R. I. R.

By the convention, was the vigorous insistence that Great Britain pay her approximate debt of $5,900,000,000 to the United States in full.

Spirited opposition marked the elections and the balloting required more than three hours, President Harrigan defeating his opponent Dr. John F. Kelly of Springfield by 845 votes.

The delegates sat in session continuously from 10 o'clock in the morning until 9:25 o'clock at night without a dragging moment so lively was the debate of opposing factions and inspiring the resolutions and speechmaking.

President Harrigan, who sat in the chair, sounded a keynote of action, pledging the organization to absolute Americanism and war on "political bosses, Socialism and Reds," and called for a continuation of the State drive to net 125,000 more members.

Other resolutions passed extended felicitations to President De Valera, denounced Admiral Sims' pro-British utterances, protested the deportation of Lord Mayor O'Callaghan, demanded payment of Britain's $5,900,000,000 debt to the United States and urged the recall of British Ambassador Geddes, and called for full recognition of Ireland by the United States.

LAUDS MEMBERSHIP DRIVE.

Patrick J. Hastings of the Michael Davitt Council, chairman of the credential committee, reported 3,496 delegates present as representing 125,000 members of the organization throughout the State. The report was greeted with prolonged cheering and it was several minutes before President Harrigan could call the convention to order.

Rev. Michael Earle, S. J., of Holy Cross College, Worcester, opened the proceedings with prayer after paying a tribute to the Celtic Cross.

"I feel very proud to welcome you to Boston," said President Harrigan. "It shows you are with Ireland and De Valera. The first lap in the membership drive netted us 125,000 members. The second lap is for another 125,000, which will have to be put over before July 1. I conducted the affairs of your organization the same as my own business. We're really ahead of the national officers in our membership drive. We produced our own literature.

"We did everything in the line of work for which we were organized. We even assisted sister States. Massachusetts is the big brother State in the United States of America and we are proud of that fact. Action is to be the keynote of the organization. It will not be an organization of bosses, political or otherwise. It is founded from the bottom up and not from the head down."

DECLARES AGAINST "REDS."

Harrigan caused tumultuous applause when he said no man or men will be allowed to use the organization.

"There's going to be action, moral and economic," he explained. "Beware of parasites. We are a united organization; there is no faction. I wear no man's collar. The organization will not stand for bossism. It is opposed to Socialists and Reds. All we want in our midst are good decent Americans."

Appointment of committees by President Harrigan was opposed by Miss Anna Niland and Thomas I. Niland of East Boston on the ground that the committees were appointed "in direct contravention of the constitution. Miss Niland appealed from the decision of the chair. Delegate Thomas F. Murray's motion that the matter be laid on the table was carried amid protests.

$33,706 ON DEPOSIT.

Secretary Nolan, after outlining the plans that led to the formation of the organization in this State, said, in part:

"The success already met in securing a membership in so short a time is indicative of what may be accomplished by consistent and unceasing effort on the lines suggested in the national officers' reports.

"It is necessary to be united to carry on a fighting campaign to arouse men and women of all races to the importance of recognising the great principle for which we are struggling in behalf of Ireland's liberty."

Treasurer Timothy P. Donohue of Lawrence submitted a report showing that the organization now has on deposit in a Lawrence bank the sum of $33,706.41.

James Culhane, organizer for Middlesex County, and several other delegates wanted Treasurer Donohue to read the salary of each officer. A motion of Christopher I. Fitzgerald of Dorchester that the report be referred to the auditing committee was carried. The motion of Secretary Nolans that "we offer our support of the Irish Republic to President De Valera," was carried.

NATIONAL DRIVE IS URGED.

Christopher I. Fitzgerald was made chairman of the election committee.

Joseph J. O'Brien of Springfield addressed the delegates on intensive congressional effort by popular organization along national lines. He said he favored congressional district councils.

"Each congressional district council shall maintain headquarters central to its district; hold regular monthly meetings and conduct an intensive drive to create, unify and express favorable public opinion, and for this purpose shall establish a permanent district campaign committee," said Mr. O'Brien.

"Each district shall receive a per capita tax from the regular dues of members in its district and the State per capita tax shall be reduced accordingly."

Martin Hunt objected to the suggestion. Patrick Hagerty of Springfield argued that O'Brien's suggestion, indorsed by the joint councils of Springfield, Holyoke, Chicopee, Chicopee Falls, Westfield, Indian Orchard, Ludlow and Wilbraham, was constructive.

By vote of the convention the matter was referred to the committee on on constitution.

Organizer Culhane of Cambridge caused a stir by naming the salaries of each organizer, declaring that he himself paid his own expenses. He was interrupted continually.

The convention then proceeded to nominate officers. John P. Kinneally of Dorchester nominated William B. Larkin for president; Delegate Sexton of Dorchester presented the name of President John F. Harrigan for reelection; Judge James Fallon of Pittsfield placed in nomination Dr. John F. Kelly of Pittsfield. Delegate Larkin withdrew in favor of Harrigan.

Miss Anna Niland of East Boston nominated Miss Mary C. Culhane of Cambridge for vice-president; James T. Kenney of Roxbury nominated John J. Foley of South Boston.

For secretary, James O'Sullivan of Lowell nominated Joseph Quinn, a newspaperman, and Mrs. Frank Scannell of Milton presented the name of Miss Mary T. Keohane. Charles T. Daly of Medford nominated Thomas M. Nolan of Brighton.

BALLOT OVER 3 HOURS.

Thomas C. Quinn of Cambridge followed with a rendition of the "Soldier's Song" of Ireland.

The balloting consumed more than three hours and all officers were reelected.

Michael O'Flaherty tried to get a resolution favoring the release from prison of James Larkin, the Irish transport leader. Delegate Horgan, head of the resolution committee, said the matter had been considered. The matter was laid on the table. Dennis D. Driscoll, labor leader, favored action on the Larkin resolution. The discussion on the subject lasted fifteen minutes, after which it was taken from the table and referred to the executive committee.

The suggestion to abolish the present State directorate was referred to the incoming officers with instructions to the councils to take up the question of the formation of sixteen congressional districts.

Charles T. Daly of Medford recommended that a message be sent to Dr. Patrick F. McCartin, the Irish envoy in this country, with instruction to convey to President Eamon De Valera "that we (delegates) have realized his wish for an organization he planned." A motion by John B. O'Higgins of Roxbury that the message be sent in the Gaelic language was carried.

OVATION TO FR. MEEHAN.

Rev. John W. Meehan of County Mayo was given an ovation when introduced for a speech. He opened his address in the Gaelic tongue.

"It makes me feel I hadn't left Ireland," said Fr. Meehan. "When I heard the shouting I was more certain I had my foot on the old sod. And there's never a sod like the old sod. When I meet people in my travels through your city I meet people who take me by the hand and ask 'Will Ireland be free? And how is Ireland, father?'

"Sure Ireland is Ireland through joy and through tears. Sure the songs of Ireland say she shall never stand for slavery. She stands for freedom and will never barter it for a mess of pottage."

Here Fr. Meehan warmed up to his subject and had the delegates in tears with the story of Ireland. He said Ireland was fighting for the same cause that Washington did; that the spirit of Washington still lives and courses through the veins of all Irishmen; that the sword of Washington was the sword of America when she entered the war.

"FIGHTING CAUSE OF GOD."

"The sword of Washington is not sheathed yet," he said, dramatically. "I believe that the sword of the America of '76 will not be sheathed until what she went into the World War for has been fully and fairly established. Ireland is fighting as an angel of light against the imperialism of darkness. Ireland is fighting the cause of God, the cause of civilisation.

"Will old Ireland be free? I always shake my head and say no, because Ireland is free. England does not rule in Ireland now; England never will rule in Ireland again. There is in Ireland an army of occupation, but that is not a government.

"Will Ireland stick it out? Well, Ireland has stuck it out for seven centuries. All the might of Great Britain cannot conquer the spirit of the unconquered Irish people."

While Fr. Meehan was describing a vision he had of the sound of a bell which he described as the "death knell of the British Empire," an elderly man in the front interrupted him with:

"May the Divine Trinity hasten the day," causing tremendous applause.

Mayor Dennis Morgan of Thurles followed with a spirited address.

BRITISH INDIA RULE FLAYED.

Taraknath Das of the State Council of the Friends of Freedom for India, severely arraigned British rule in India and presented the charges of his organization against England.

Mr. Das set forth that as a direct result of British exploitation the native industrial system has almost wholly disappeared and that the natives are forced to work for the production of British imperial necessities. He showed that the British system for its own ends has suppressed education and literally starved the people of that self-supporting country.

The system of opium monoply was devised for the double purpose of financial extortion and drugging the free spirit of the people, said Mr. Das. He charged that Britain has deliberately sought to crush self-government aspirations and by systematic destruction of initiative in administration and executive control of all public functions and that during the past few years a course of ruthless suppression and oppression has been conducted to overcome the rising tide of indignation and demand for freedom.

CLOSED BY DR. ALLEN.

Rev. Dr. Albert W. Allen, an Episcopal minister, who is a direct descendant of Ethan Allen of the American Revolution, stirred the delegates with a patriotic address.

"Ireland's chief weapon is her moral and intellectual force," he said. "If the nations will sustain the Irish people in their fight President De Valera will be able to write on the monument of time Robert Emmet's epitaph, 'Ireland a nation.' This convention has fired a shot that will be heard 'round the world.'"

Dr. Allen closed the convention by giving the benediction and Thomas C. Quinn of Cambridge led in the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner."

Irish Convention Resolutions

Resolutions adopted at the first convention of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic were, in effect, as follows:

The United States was asked to extend full "recognition without intervention" to the Republic of Ireland, the citizens, soldiers and officials of which were congratulated for their devotion to the cause.

People of Massachusetts were congratulated for their interest in the Irish cause, specially gratifying in the face of British propaganda, and all classes were urged to join the world-wide freedom movement.

Delegates were congratulated for the wonderful success of the association, and it was recommended that the State directorate devise a program of popular education of the facts of the Irish aims and of the obvious truth that the United States ought to repay Ireland for past favors by recognition.

Admiral Sims was denounced as a "catspaw of English intrigue" by his pro-British utterances, and court-martial and apologies were demanded because of his abuse of official position and misrepresentation of the Irish people.

Full payment of the $5,900,000,000 debt of the British Empire to the United States was demanded.

It was agreed and urged that the Irish in America offset British policies and propaganda by refusing to do business with English interests when it is legally possible.

The Nebraska House of Representatives was condemned for its un-American refusal to give a hearing to Miss Nora MacSwiney, sister of the Lord Mayor of Cork.

Those newspapers of Boston and the state that advocated "the rights of human liberty, especially Ireland" were extended appreciation and congratulation.

The association and the entire population of the state were called upon to relieve the hardship and suffering in Ireland resulting from brutal British rule, by sending contributions to the Massachusetts Branch of the "Irish Relief Committee," No. 166 Devonshire street.

Recall of Ambassador Geddes to England was demanded because of his attempts to dictate the policy and government of our people.

Aims of 310,000,000 people in India to attain self-government were commended and the success of their cause was heartily endorsed.

Women of the State were called upon to take advantage of their enfranchisement and participate in governmental affairs by registering and voting.

The movement to revive the literature, language, customs and history of the Gaelic race was indorsed.

SINN FEINERS' BLAMED FOR BURNING FACTORIES

at Stockport. Other attempts to burn industrial plants were reported from Rochdale and Rydon. On account of the vigilance of the police and firemen, the damage was small.

British police in Ireland carried out an official reprisal in the Anglepool district for the killing of two members of the crown forces on January 24, according to a Central News dispatch from Dublin.

Several houses were burned after the occupants had been given an hour's notice to vacate.

Powerful precautionary measures will be taken by Scotland Yard tomorrow to prevent attacks by Sinn Feiners and hostile demonstrations by the unemployed when Parliament is opened by King George.

Strong forces of police and secret service agents will guard Parliament Building and will line the streets through which the King will drive on his way to Westminster from Buckingham palace.

"Especial precautions" of a secret nature will be adopted to protect the royal family during the opening ceremonies.

Two policemen, one soldier and three civilians were killed in week-end disorders in Ireland, according to a casualty list issued in Dublin today. Seven civilians, two of them women, five policemen and six soldiers were wounded.

MILITARY TRUCK BOMBED.

Reports of week-end disturbances in Ireland include the bombing of a military auto truck at Booterstoen, near Dublin. Rifle shots were also exchanged.

Two of the assailants were seen to fall and a stray bullet killed James Brophy, who was asleep in bed near where the trouble occurred.

Another man, John Healy, a dairyman, who was more than sixty yards from the scene of the ambush, was also killed.

At Macroon Sinn Feiners hurled bombs and fired rifles at the city hall, wounding three cadets.

AN EDITORIAL ON ADVERTISING

THE men who signed the Declaration of Independence had faith in it. Its success meant fame—its failure, death. But they had faith—they identified themselves with it—they signed.

So with the manufacturer who trade-marks and advertises his goods. His trade-mark name is his signature to the pledge—"I back this article, its quality, its value, and its service to the public. I am responsible for it; the praise or blame belongs to me." He has faith.

"Caveat Emptor!" said the Romans—"Let the buyer beware!" "Buy by the trade-mark name!" we say today—"Let the buyer be wise!"

Today if a man makes a product that is good enough to be proud of, he trade marks and advertises it, that all the world may know him as the author. This mark is his pledge of quality—of his responsibility — of his word of honor to you that he backs his product to the limit. And if a manufacturer does these things, let the buyer be wise—let him look for the trade-mark name and buy with his money a pledged commodity.

But if a manufacturer avoids or neglects these things—if he makes and sells a product without mark, name or sponsor—"Caveat Emptor!"

The Government specifies that silverware must contain 925-1000 of the virgin metal before it can bear the mark "Sterling." This is for your protection.

But what of such products as tooth-brushes, hats, kitchen utensils and collars? There is no Government specifications of quality there! What protection have you in buying these and the thousand other things you use in daily life?

You have the trade-mark name of established reputation.

Remember that a manufacturer's advertised trade-mark name is to an article of merchandise what a signature is to a letter. It is a symbol with which he says—"I made this article and I'm proud of it."

An un-trade-marked article is like an anonymous letter — it may be trustworthy, but who knows? If the manufacturer knows, his trade-mark isn't there to prove it. It is a pig in a poke—a doubtful quantity.

It is for all of us to spend our money as we see fit. It is for the wisest of us to get the utmost of quality and value for our money—and in this category come the consistent purchasers of standard trade-marked goods.

An advertised, trade-marked article has the 100% backing of the man who made it. If it is an established product, it is only such because it has passed the acid test of public use. If it is new, the trade-mark is the manufacturer's pledge to stand behind the article and see it make good—or make good for it. But it is his—he wants you to know it, and he tells you with his trade-mark name.

An established trade-mark name protects you. For safety and economy today buy trade-marked goods of known value.

SENATOR REED URGES U. S. ACT ON FOREIGN LOANS EXPOSE

COMMENDS SUIT BY HEARST

Congress Should Aid Action Against More Foreign Loans, Says Missouri Senator

By JAMES A. REED.

United States Senator from Missouri.

Washington, Feb. 14.—After Secretary Houston's astonishing statement that he proposed to make further commitments to foreign governments I am very glad that Mr. Hearst brought and action in court to restrain him from doing so. Things have come to a fine pass in this country though, when to prevent the sacrifice of our most valuable merchant fleet and later the squandering of taxpayers' money a private citizen is compelled to go into court to stop such unlawful action by public officials swon to enforce the law.

The people of the United States have a right to know what public officials have done or contemplate doing with the treasury funds, particularly so when there is strong evidence that the course proposed is illegal. It is conceivable, of course, that some portions of the European loans have been made under conditions which are against public policy to disclose, although I find it difficult to grant even that.

CONGRESS SHOULD ACT.

Certainly though, the people are entitled to know every effort which has been made by any country in the way of repudiation, and particularly to know whether such effort is in the form of tentative suggestion or constitutes a denite repudiation.

In the light of all the facts brought out by Mr. Hearst, Congress ought to act irrespective of the outcome of the suit against Mr. Houston.

The Secretary of the Treasury has definitely stated that there are funds in the treasury which he contemplated loaning to foreign governments or extending further credits on.

Speaking for myself, I believe that we have paid out the last dollar to any European government that we ought to pay as the result of this war. While we may be lenient in the matter of demanding immediate interest payments where there would be embarrassment thereby, we should nevertheless insist on as prompt a settlement as is compatible with the circumstances.

RAPS "GIFT" TO RUSSIANS.

But further loans are another question. Since the last shot was fired in Argonne and the armistice concluded we have paid out to European governments a sum of money nearly equal to the entire debt of the Civil War, and every cent was paid out illegally.

In addition we have supported, according to the secretary's own admission, the so-called Bahkmetieff legation, which professes to represent the Kerensky government of Russia, a government which never really functioned and which has long since been routed.

It is even stated that since the fall of that government we have permitted Mr. Bahkmetieff to check out of a bank approximately $59,000,000 of American money and have actually supported him and the horde of his retainers and hangers-on.

This is a fair example of the spirit which has governed the expenditure of the people's money.

PEOPLE WILL LEARN TRUTH.

Another example is that of the five million dollars credit to Liberia. Of this amount $26,000 was used to pay the expenses of the colored brethren who represented Liberia at the peace conference in Paris. This, despite the fact that the law under which the credit and expenditures were made stated specifically that it was enacted more effectively to prosecute the war between the United States and its enemies. Under it the President was authorized to make loans only to countries "then engaged in war with the enemies of the United States."

I would like to bet a hat that people will know all the facts no matter what obstructive tactics are indulged in. A little more of this kind of administration ought to lead to the enactment of some sort of statute which would establish a spendthrift trust and place the custodians of our money under the guardianship of a court.

ACCUSED OF SHOOTING FORMER LANDLORD DEAD

Francesco Bono, thirty-eight years old, of Syracuse, N. Y., was arraigned in Central Court today, charged with the murder, Saturday night, of Antonio Carbonello, thirty-eight years old, of No. 19 Sheafe street, North End, with whom he formerly boarded. Bono was arrested on suspicion before the police were aware that a crime had been committed, and later, when confronted with the facts by Lieutenant Ridlon of the Hanover Street Station, is alleged to have admitted shooting Carbonello, whom he declared a fortune teller had warned him against as about to do him an injury.

Haverhill Song Star Inspired by Mother

Photos by Bain News

Miss Cora Chase, former Haverhill girl and now a Metropolitan opera star, whose success has not interfered with her love for home virtues. Photos show her doing needlework and reading.

Although a full-fledged opera star, promoted to that rank overnight after a single performance at the Metropolitan Opera, Cora Chase, the former Havehrill girl, is still the girlish, charming, unaffected young woman whom her New England friends remember from her student days.

Cora's debut was as Gilda in "Rigoletto" a few days ago. On that occasion, when the audience accorded her an ovation, she declared she sang to her dead mother's spirit, and was inspired by it.

She is something more than a mere golden voice to be pampered and fostered at the expense of all other womanly accomplishments. Miss Chase can wield a needle as well as the next girl, and doesn't mind nibbling bonbons while she reads a current magazine.

No doubt the many years spent with her mother while the girl was studying in Italy served to keep alive home loves and home virtues amid all the hard work, trials and pitfalls that beset the young musician in an alien country. Mrs. Chase was in close association with her daughter all through the eleven years of the latter's apprenticeship, attending every lesson—some 3,000 in number—and all rehearsals. On the very brink of the young singer's debut at the Metropolitan Opera, the mother died, in Christmas week.

Besides her sewing and reading, Miss Chase has for recreation a unique collection of dolls and carved animals.

LAWRENCE WIFE TAKES LIFE WITH GAS

Lays Self on Blanket in Sealed Pantry of Home and Awaits Death

Lawrence, Feb. 14.—Locking herself in the pantry of her home, No. 78 Exchange street, Mrs. William Cunningham, aged thirty-four, opened the gas cock and lying down on a blanket which she had spread on the pantry floor, awaited death, according to the police. Her lifeless body was discovered by her husband, who forced an entrance to the pantry, on entering the home.

The authorities, in their report on the case, stated that Mrs. Cunningham took every means to insure the success of her suicide plans, stuffing a towel in the cracks of the pantry window and sealing the door with a bedspread.

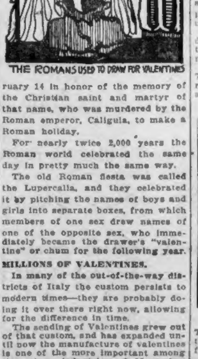
According to the woman's husband she did not enjoy good health and was constantly brooding over the death of her mother, which occurred several months ago.

Today's the Day! Have You Picked Your Valentine?

Roses are red,
Violets are blue
Sugar is sweet
And so are you.

Who is your Valentine?

Of course you have one picked out and ready for the coming year, but if you have forgotten it, today is THE DAY.



THE ROMANS USED TO DRAW FOR VALENTINES

For nearly 2,000 years the Christian world has been celebrating February 14 in honor of the memory of the Christian saint and martyr of that name, who was murdered by the Roman emperor, Caligula, to make a Roman holiday.

For nearly twice 2,000 years the Roman world celebrated the same day in pretty much the same way.

The old Roman fiesta was called the Lupercalia, and they celebrated it by pitching the names of boys and girls into separate boxes, from which members of one sex drew names of one of the opposite sex, who immediately became the drawer's "valentine" or chum for the following year.

MILLIONS OF VALENTINES.

In many of the out-of-the-way districts of Italy the custom persists to modern times—they are probably doing it over there right now, allowing for the difference in time.

The sending of Valentines grew out of that custom, and has expanded until now the manufacture of valentines is one of the more important among the minor industries of Massachusetts.

St. Valentine's Day means tremendous lot of work for the valentine factories scattered throughout the old Bay State.

Worcester, right in the heart of the State, is the centre also of the valentine industry.

Millions and millions of them are made there, and millions and millions of verses are sent broadcast through the land to please the continent.

Did you ever investigate the mkaing of valentines? Well you would be startled at some of the figures those 'wise' in the game of making valentines, hurl at you when you begin asking questions. One factory in Worcester employes more than five hundred operatives to make these Cupid's cards.

And that's only a part of it. From all over the country come the verses that are used on the cards. Many the clever housewife, with a knack for turning out pretty rhymes, counts upon the money she gets from the valentine makers for her verses, to help out the family exchequer.

FOUR PROCESSES.

And artists who have not yet "arrived," but are still struggling to make a name and fortune for themselves, devote some of their time to preparation of the designs on the cards and leaflets.

The valentine goes through four distinct processes before it is ready to be slipped into the envelope and mailed to "the best girl."

The first of course is the designing. That complete, it goes to the stencil maker, who turns out the dies, cuts and stencils.

Following that comes the printing.

WILL YOU BE MY VALENTINE

The colored valentine goes through the presses several times, one each for each different color.

And then comes the most difficult part of the lot, the lace cutting. Though this is done by machinery the filmy things are so delicate that they must be handled with extreme care to prevent tearing, for who wants a torn valentine?

After the cutting of the lace work is done experts assemble the printed parts and the lace parts and the valentine is ready for shipment.

PARDON OF BOY STORE THIEF IS SOUGHT

Lynn Folk Seek to Free Youth Given Ten to Fifteen Years in State Prison

A petition for the parole of Joseph R. Miller, the nineteen-year-old Lynn boy serving a sentence of from ten to fifteen years in State Prison for breaking and entering and larceny, was put in circulation in Lynn today.

Coincident with this move, a committee of Lynn men, including the boy's father, called upon Penal Institutions Commissioner Sanford Bates in Miller's behalf.

Miller was sentenced by Judge Fosdick in Essex Superior Criminal Court in Salem three weeks ago.

He was convicted of a series of breaks into stores, from which cigarettes, tobacco and sometimes small sums of money were taken.

The petition was started at the service of the Austin Square Baptist Church after Rev. Howard B. Smith had preached an affecting sermon on young Miller's case.

The clergyman pointed out that the State did not make the claim Miller was the leader of a gang of thieves.

He referred to Miller's youth and his love for his mother, and declared he should not be kept locked up for years like a hardened criminal.

The petition was put into the Lynn General Electric plant today and signed by many of the employes.

Mary MacSwiney Sturdy Fighter for Free Erin

Miss Mary MacSwiney

Miss Mary MacSwiney, whose articles on present conditions in Ireland will be published by the Boston American, beginning today, is a sister of the late Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork and one of the outstanding figures of the fight for Irish freedom.

Miss MacSwiney visited Boston, Lawrence, Fall River, Springfield and other New England cities, where she was received with tremendous enthusiasm, and made a remarkable impression on her hearers.

Her impassioned addresses on Ireland showed a keen grasp of the situation, and her appeals for the cause brought a flood of contributions amounting to thousands upon thousands of dollars.

U. S. Blind to Erin's Plight Says Miss MacSwiney

are asking today. How can Americans, so chivalrous, so pitiful toward Belgium, look on indifferently at an Ireland suffering such wrongs as were never inflicted on Belgium, such atrocities as have never before been committed by a tyrannous power.

And my experience in the United States has convinced me that the answer lies exactly there. They do not know the truth and their ignorance is largely due to the propaganda, the false, insidious, but powerful propaganda, which England carries on in this country.

GREAT IS TRUTH AND IT WILL PREVAIL.

Lord Northcliffe spent many millions on that propaganda of falsehood. We have no millions to spend, but great is truth and it will prevail.

Already we have succeeded in dispersing some of the clouds of ignorance. President De Valera made the cause of Ireland known as it never had been before; the long, slow martyrdom of Terence MacSwiney and his fellow hunger strikers aroused the sympathy and conscience of people all over the world; people began to realize that none but the highest and holiest cause could inspire men with such a spirit of endurance.

And so today the ear of America is open to the truth, and the honest minds and tender hearts of this great people, hearing the truth, will cease to be indifferent.

What is the truth? What is this struggle, this eternal recrudescence of the "Irish question"? What has it to do with America?

FINAL BATTLE IN AGE-LONG FIGHT

The truth is that this struggle, this present warfare in Ireland, is but the final battle in the age-long fight for freedom, which Ireland has waged since the invader first set foot on her shore.

The truth is that the Irish nation demands its freedom today as she has always demanded it; her people have given of her best and bravest in every generation to purchase liberty; they are offering now, day by day, while the civilized world goes on unheeding, the heart's blood of Ireland's greatest, the agony of her mothers, the pitiful cry of her little ones, rendered homeless and fatherless.

And all for what? For the love of that liberty for which America fought in 1776. To obtain that right to freedom and self-determination on behalf of which America fought in 1917.

No citizen of this free country has any idea of the horrors of life in Ireland today. Since the Declaration of Independence and the formal election of the Republican Parliament which followed, the oppression of the Irish people by England—always present even though apparently dormant at times—daily increased; one by one their liberties were filched, freedom of speech followed liberty of the press; homes were invaded, jails filled.

England at last realized that she could no longer stifle the voice of Freedom in Ireland.

VOICE CRYING ALOUD FOR LIBERTY

That voice was crying aloud for the application of the liberty that England demanded for Belgium, and the world was beginning to listen and ask, Why not?

And so England let loose her terror in Ireland, determined to exterminate where she could not subdue. She hurried troops to the Irish front, she enrolled her Black and Tans and she ignored from the outset every law of civilized warfare. Not an atrocity of which she accused Germany but she practiced herself in Ireland a hundred times over.

And all these horrors and atrocities are practiced on the civilian population.

Old men, women and little children are the victims of England's brutal rage because she cannot subdue this small nation or break the spirit of its people.

How convey to this free people—ignorant of the terrors of modern warfare—an ideal of the atmosphere in which the Irish people live? By day the streets are filled with troops; motor lorries, manned by fully armed soldiers and Black and Tans, rush through the streets, every soldier carrying his rifle at the ready and firing recklessly when the mood takes him, tanks and armored cars, their guns ready and trained on the inhabitants, are conspicuous everywhere.

Sometimes a single shot, sometimes a fusillade, rings out, the people in the streets take cover, and it is indeed providential if only some plate-glass windows in the big business houses are broken and not some woman or little child who is the victim. These lorries dash along the streets, their occupants more often drunk than not.

One day they throw down a man and kill him; no redress. Another they overturn a perambulator; baby and nurse both thrown down; they do not even stop to see if they have killed the child.

They are utterly undisciplined. Their business is to strike terror into the inhabitants, and they have been promised entire immunity, no matter what their crimes.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

AUTHORITY FOR LOANS DOUBTED BY M'ADOO

Asked Congress to Broaden His Powers, but Request Met With Defeat

isting appropriations is about [illegible]. The proposed advances of this sum constitute only a small proportion of the needs of France and Belgium for the work of restoration.

Mr. McAdoo added that he thought the foreign loans were "perfectly good" and would be repaid. This was after the armistice had been signed. He discussed the possibility of the United States cancelling foreign indebtedness and said he believed this would never be done unless an overwhelming public sentiment in the United States should demand it.

WANTED BROADER POWERS.

"We are the creditors of the European allies to the extent of over [illegible] and have a very real interest in the restoration of their economic life. For these reasons I urgently ask the authority to broaden the purpose for which the loans to foreign governments may be made."

Thus spoke Secretary Glass in 1919.

At the same time Albert Rathbone, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, said:

"This bill extends the time for the making of loans and the purpose for which foreign loans may be made. We are limited in making advances to aid in the prosecution of the war or for national security and defence, and that is the reason we inserted the provision to make loans to promote foreign commerce."

The American Peace Commission had hardly arrived in Paris before its members were besieged by allied representatives with pleas for the cancellation by the United States of all foreign loans. All overtures to this effect were from the start indignantly rejected.

This fact became known on extremely high authority today. It was also learned from another source that not only did President Wilson refuse to consider remission of the debt, but vetoed a proposal to conduct conference on any phase of the debts owed the United States at any place except Washington. It had been suggested to him that these matters could be discussed at the Versailles conference.

Senator Carter Glass, who was Secretary of the Treasury at the time of the Peace Conference, described today for the first time attempts made to secure discussion of America's loans at a place outside the sphere of American influence.

WHERE WILSON STOOD.

Never during his incumbency did President Wilson convey to him by the slightest intimation that he would look with favor on anything but full and complete payment of the debts owed the United States, said Senator Glass. He added:

"It is ridiculous to suggest that President Wilson ever held such thoughts in any form. There wasn't the slightest intimation from the President to the Treasury that he ever contemplated even modification of the loan agreements.

In fact, when it was suggested at the Peace Conference that he selected Paris instead of Washington as the place for conferences at which details connected with the loans still should be worked out, President Wilson readily confirmed my recommendation against this proposal. As a result, those who sought to remove the conferences to Europe abandoned their efforts and Washington was agreed upon.

REPORT IS RIDICULED.

A report published in New York that an alleged agreement by President Wilson to lend his assistance to remission of the loans had been discussed in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was ridiculed today by Senators Hitchcock, Fall, Johnson, Pomerene and Pittman, all members of the committee. Senators Knox, Moses and Swanson had previously denied any knowledge or discussion of the subject. Said Senator Pittman:

"I have never heard any such story, either in or out of the committee. I don't believe there is the slightest foundation for it whatsoever."

Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President, said the White House would not pay any attention to the report.

New York, Feb. 14.—"Women nowadays seem to shed a husband in the same way they would an old coat," declared Supreme Court Justice Ford in commenting today upon the increase in divorce in this city last year. "They rush out to Reno, stay there just long enough to establish a residence and obtain a decree and then grab a new husband on the way back home."

There were 3,164 divorces granted here in 1920 against 1,808 in 1919. Twenty-six hundred and ninety-nine new divorce suits were filed last year against 2,421 in 1919.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. Its very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

WONDERLAND PICTURED IN EAST

"Land of the forest and the rock,
Of dark blue lake and mighty river,
Of mountains reared aloft to mock
The storm's career, the lightning's shock,
My own green land forever."
—Whittier.

We hear so much these days of various wonderlands. Each section of this country, and of every land in the universe, undoubtedly has its own outstanding scenic and historical features. Yet scenery, like a prophet, is "without honor in its own town."

Many thousands of dollars are spent annually by New Englanders in travel. It is splendid that New Englanders can afford to broaden their knowledge and their ideas in this manner. But how many New Englanders are conversant with the intimate history of their own section of the country and how many of them have traveled through New England's beauty spots before seeking the scenic delights of more remote locations?

OUR OWN WONDERLAND.

One of the most beautiful books of the year has been placed on the market by the Page Company of Boston. This book deals with the scenic and historical beauty of the East and is called "A Wonderland of the East." The author is William Copeman Kitchin, Ph. D., late professor of French language and literature in the University of Vermont.

Professor Kitchin is frank to say that he, like many others, "saw Europe first." This naturally placed him in the position of a critic as he started his motor tours through Massachusetts, Vermont, Maine, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Eastern New York. And, like many others, Professor Kitchin was surprised to find at his very dooryard, so-to-say, the beautiful things which he had traveled far to enjoy.

The book is not only at once entertaining and educational, but to the person who loves to wander among lakes, valleys and mountains either afoot or in his motor car, "A Wonderland of the East," serves as a splendid guide book.

ONE BIG POEM.

The author is fond of poetry and the book is scattered throughout with quotations brought to his mind by the various scenes. But outside of these verses, it might well be said that the text of the book is one big poem, itself.

For, when one enjoys the grandeur of nature as does Professor Kitchin his writings of this sort are very apt to be poetic. For is not nature the original poem and are not the gorgeous bits of scenery but the stanzas which go to make up this poem?

Space will not permit of going far into the details of this beautiful book, but we cannot recommend it too strongly. So much reading is done in this modern age of the books which are read and forgotten all in a day. These are days of jazz in both pleasure and business. But there are many who we feel would be glad to obtain a book with which they could sit down and spend a happy evening, profitable and lasting in results, and every page unfolding some happy surprise. Such books are, unfortunately, all too few.

"A Wonderland of the East" is handsomely bound, splendidly printed and profusely illustrated. It contains an afterword which is a splendid motorist's guide, with distances, directions and maps which should prove of great value to anyone contemplating a vacation tour next summer.

COMING BOOK ON LABOR PROBLEMS

"Human Engineering" is the title of a book by Eugee Wera, to be published next week by D. Appleton & Company. It is a study of the management of labor that goes straight to the heart of the problems of industrial relations. This volume is the first to systematically attempt to determine the principles of human engineering and to apply them to the cure of industrial unrest. Exceedingly interesting facts are shown and Mr. Wera's analysis of the motives and forces that control the behavior of labor are of the greatest value.

Wells Raps British Policy in Ireland

Henry G. Wells, the noted English writer, in his new historical work, discussing British countenance of the machinations of Carson and Lord Birkenhead in Ireland, says:

"By such treasons against their subjects empires destroy themselves. The true strength of rulers and empires lies not in armies and emotions, but in the belief of men that they are inflexibly open and truthful and legal. So soon as a government departs from that standard it ceases to be anything more than 'the gang in possession' and its days are numbered."

—From "The Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.

Wells' Great History Makes People Think

Just once so often there comes along a book that is good and that is helpful to humanity.

By such a book we mean one that has been written with thoughtful and conscientious purpose and one that will make its readers think and think right.

There can be no doubt that this definition is filled by "The Outline of History," by the noted English writer, Henry G. Wells.

A THOUGHT GENERATOR.

Here is a book that will make people think. As such it is to be welcomed.

The basis of the editorial principle of the Boston American and other Hearst publications for many years has been to make the American people think. It is the educative book and particularly the educative newspaper that is the strongest concomitant of democratic civilization. As Mr. Wells is careful to point out in several parts of his work, it was the absence of the newspaper that contributed largely to the continuance of barbaric conditions in early Europe, and it is the newspaper that has had a most potent influence in the making of civilization.

There are the healthy beginnings of a liberal education within the two volumes of Mr. Wells' work. Don't be afraid to tackle them on account of their size. Open them up at any point and start to read. Your attention will be gripped from the start. Here is history in readable form. Here are just the things we all want to know about the world's peoples and the world's so-called rulers put in such interesting style and with such pungent, incisive comment and occasional flash of relieving humor that the reading of it is not a task but an enjoyment.

Let us try to tell in a few words just what this fine book is.

WHAT THE BOOK IS.

It is a concentrated essence of the entire past existence of the world—from the primitive nebula of various million years B. C. to the nebulae of hot air that arose at Versailles and other points immediately after the World War of 1914-1918.

It traces man from his ape-like beginnings, through his cave-man and stone-age struggles, the first evidence of civilization in the great valleys of the Nile, the Euphrates and the Tigris, the subsequent rise and fall of great empires, the evolution of the mythologies and religions, the deplorably slow growth of learning and trained intelligence, and, above all, the hardships, the abasements, the ambitions and the victories of the common people.

Mr. Wells' heart is with the common people. His "history" is their history, and although he has to do immediately with a tedious number of emperors and kings and shahs and other high muck-a-mucks, they simply serve him as landmarks to indicate the influences that were hindering or helping the people.

There are two influences that he thinks have helped the people most. These are printing and representative government.

WRITING AND PRINTING.

He expresses the greatest amazement that the world got along as long as it did without the art of printing. Writing was a fine thing in its way but writing could not filter out among the people and the written scroll was the exclusive possession of the narrow-minded, self-centred, sybaritic few. An eloquent passage on this point is worth quoting:

"Nevertheless, from the first writings onward a new sort of tradition, an enduring and immortal tradition, began in the minds of men. Life, through mankind, grew thereafter more and more distinctly conscious of itself and its world. It is a thin streak of intellectual growth we trace in history, at first in a world of tumultuous ignorance and forgetfulness; it is like a mere line of light coming through the chink of an opening door into a darkened room; but slowly it widens, it grows. At last came a time in the history of Europe when the door, at the push of the printer, began to open more rapidly. Knowledge flared up, and as it flared it ceased to be the privilege of a favored minority. For us now that door swings wider, and the light behind grows brighter. Misty it is still, glowing through clouds of dusk and reek. The door is not half open; the light is but a light new lit. Our world today is only in the beginning of knowledge."

Such a book, after a complete reading, gives one the sense of standing on a high mountain and sniffing the fresh air. Or, to use one of Mr. Wells' own expressions, it is like viewing history from an aeroplane. It gives one a wider view of the world and its people than ever before.

To most of us the idea of history involves certain indefinite notions of the chronicles of Greece, Rome and England, dating back to our school days, with a somewhat completer knowledge of the past affairs of our own America. But looking down from Mr. Wells' aeroplane we are astonished to find that Greece, Rome and England are but mere dots on the cosmic map and that long before this Western continent swam into the ken of history there were vast nations, immense, civilized nations, with luxury, art, literature and toiling millions covering enormous regions in Africa, Mesopotamia, Persia, India, China and elsewhere that in many respects were not only more enduring but more enlightened than the boasted communities of Greece and Rome.

ROMANCE OF HISTORY.

This is the romance of history, and Mr. Wells, as the trained novelist, has made the most of it.

There is so much in this wonderful book that it is hard to keep within bounds in picking the good points. Let the reader seek for himself.

There are beautiful chapters that can be read by themselves with intense enjoyment. Such, for instance, are the account of the lives of Christ and Buddha and Confucius and their teachings, of the rise and tumble of the great overgrown giant of Rome, the story of Alexander the Great and his would-empire fizzle, of Napoleon and his ditto, of the submerging of Europe by the Migratory tribes, of—but why go on?

As we started by saying, so we should end—"The Outline of History" is a book that will make men think. In a democracy such as ours there is always apt to be an overplus of action with a minimum of thought. Action without right thinking tends to barbarism. Action, energy, democracy dominated by right thinking lead to human happiness. Any factor that tends to this effect is to be encouraged. Of such is this book of Mr. Wells.

PROMISE AND PROPHECY.

Here is the promise and the prophecy of his last page:

"History is and must always be no more than an account of beginnings. We can venture to prophesy that the next chapter to be written will tell, though perhaps with long interludes of setback and disaster, of the final achievement of world-wide political and social unity. But it will mean no resting stage, nor even a breathing stage, before the development of a new struggle and of new and vaster efforts. Men will unify only to intensify the search for knowledge and power, and live as ever for new occasions. Animal and vegetable life, the obscure processes of psychology, the intimate structure of matter and the interior of our earth, will yield their secrets and endow their conqueror. Life begins perpetually."

TWO WORKS ON CHILD TRAINING

In these days when whole communities are being stirred up over charges of immorality among the young people as well as the elders, educators, doctors and scientists, to say nothing of mothers and fathers, are striving to find the source of the evil and stamp it out. No doubt much that we hear is exaggerated, or at least many of the actions reported are the result of thoughtlessness. But where there is smoke there is fire. And what can be done in the way of fire protection?

Small, Maynard Company of Boston have published two books which they hope will be of great value to parents and teachers of the young. One is "Sex Education," by Walter M. Gallichan and the other is "Character Training in Childhood," by Mary S. Haviland, Research secretary of the National Child Welfare Association. Each of these authors is an authority on the subject of child training and sex knowledge and the books should be of great use to all who have the future of children in their hands.

The introduction of "sex education" states at the outset: "The moral and rational direction of the erotic or sexual impulse, through rightful education in the home and the school, is now recognised by most thoughtful minds as an essential of social ethics and national hygiene."

This is undoubtedly true. We have dealt with the present alarming conditions long enough in an abstract way. Students of these subjects, such as these two authors, have formed definite opinions as to cause and effect, and their research work and practical study of the problem should be utilised by the public in general.

WILSON WRITES ABOUT FRANKLIN

Among the various centenaries in which America is indulging, that celebrating the two hundredth anniversary of the arrival of Benjamin Franklin in Philadelphia (the opening of his career) ought to be especially popular.

Woodrow Wilson has perhaps characterised him as well as will ever be done in his critical introduction to the autobiography in the Century Classics series, published by the Century Co. The following are some fragments.

"Half peasant, only half man of the world, philanthropist, scientist, man of letters, his broad, plain, sunny nature fertile in every part of whatever is fit to nourish and be serviceable to the race. . . . And yet there is nowhere any note of distinction. . . . It is odd to see how close kin the man seems to the French savants and thinkers of his day, and yet how different he is. . . . Franklin salted their philosophy with sound American sense. . . . used it for the most part only upon the objects it was really suited to elucidate. . . . left its vagaries to the French who invented them."

He calls attention to the fact that the autobiography, "essentially self-laudatory" as such a project must be, "has not the low tone of conceit. . . . but is flavored to the taste of the most critical and judicious. The salt of Franklin's own good sense keeps the matter sound and untainted."

NOTED BOOKS IN ELEVENTH EDITION

The eleventh printing of "White Shadows in the South Sea" is announced by the Century Co. One of Theodore Roosevelt's books also—his "Stories of the Great West," illustrated by Frederick Remington, a book for the delectation of small and great boys—has reached its eleventh

Lives to See the Prescription He Wrote in 1892 the Worlds Most Popular Laxative Remedy

DR. W. B. CALDWELL TODAY
Born Shelbyville, Mo., March 27, [illegible]
Began the manufacture of his famous prescription in 1892

Founder of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, long past Biblical old age, but hale and hearty—Still sees patients daily—Wonderful achievement of a "country doctor."

WHEN I started to practice medicine, back in 1875, there were no pills or tablets or salt waters for the relief of constipation, and no artificial remedies made from coal tar.

The prescription for constipation that I used early in my practice, and which I put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid remedy, and I have never had reason to change it. I intended it for women, children and elderly people, and these need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

I am gratified to say that under successful management my prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that over eight million bottles were sold by druggists last year proves that it has won the confidence of mothers whose chief interest is the health of their children.

It is particularly pleasing to me to know that the biggest half of those eight million bottles were bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for grownups. The price of a bottle holding 50 average treatments is sixty cents; such a bottle will last a family several months.

I have never made a secret of what is in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a compound of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. These ingredients are endorsed in the U. S. Pharmacopoeia. I consider Syrup Pepsin today in the serious 82nd year of my age, as I did in 1892, the best remedy a family can have in the house for the safe relief of constipation and its accompanying ills, such as headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and I believe if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—Advertisement.

HUB'S PRESTIGE NOT LOST, SAYS ART CRITIC

"Influence Permeates Whole Country," Commissioner C. Howard Walker Declares

"Boston has not lost any of her prestige. She has just gained a new prestige, in a model way."

C. Howard Walker, architect, and new member of the Art Commission, recently appointed by Mayor Peters, is responsible for this statement about Boston.

The new art commissioner believes in Boston in spite of new, false prophets, who tell about how art and music and "literachoor" have long ago departed.

"Not at all," says Commissioner Walker. "The quality of Boston is still leavening the whole lump; leading our entire country, North, South, East and West. Even statistics prove it. At the Chicago Exposition in 1893 we found that 80 per cent. of the contributions were from Boston and New England.

AFFECTION FOR BOSTON.

"At the St. Louis Exposition, Boston's percentage was large, though not quite as large as 80 per cent. But, all the time, the inspiring procession marches forth of young people who have got their education here and have gone out to carry Boston's learning and Boston's influence into the far corners of the country.

"Now, I have traveled in the West and I believe in the West. I am afraid, in some quarters, I am not considered a good Bostonian because I don't always give our city the credit those of the older school give, a little blindly. We have, in our Boston, I will admit, an aura on our heads. Perhaps we do not deserve it, perhaps there is no reason for it.

"But, nevertheless, whether we admit the aura or not, we must admit that hardly a man or woman tarries within our city for long without getting strong affection for our Boston. There are students who go away, heart broken at parting and come back to live here, whenever they can.

BOSTON'S DISTINCT POSITION.

"Even the little slurs that are aimed at our city, are aimed good humoredly. For Boston permeates the whole country, and her influence is very beneficial. Boston has for herself, among American cities, a distinct position of kindliness of feeling directed toward her from everywhere. Boston has done good and not harm to whole generations of incomers. Not in the planting of banners, are we great, but in the hidden strength of the spirit, speaking out in external living."

Walker then spoke of criticism, and showed himself, thereby, a most tolerant men.

"I have little patience with destructive criticism," said he. "Don't condemn, let alone, is my motto. If a thing is not good, pass it by in silence. When your opinion is asked, and the thing is manifestly bad, then give your reasons. But make your criticism against the fundamental thing which has been distorted, not on the specific thing. And, always where there is a chanace, eulogize by all means."

GREAT OPPOTUNITIES.

Of the divisions which, from of old, have set off the mob from the artist, Walker is very tolerant.

"We all dislike the infringement of our private opinions," said he. "Too many artists have seemed to feel themselves supermen. This cannot but irritate the man who sees this. So I would be the last person to force beauty upon anybody.

"There is never any permanent gain received from making anybody do anything against his desire. If you wish to encourage beauty, try to influence the minds of people so they will desire, appreciate and enjoy beauty. The very first impulse of anyone, naturally, is to rebel, when you tell them they know nothing about these things. But show them certain things are very beautiful and you have begun to influence and to educate.

"But on the whole subject of art and artists and the people, and our American life, with its great lack of homogeneity, I am nothing but optimistic. There are the greatest opportunities if taken advantage of, according to the knowledge of our people. And our citizens less versed in art, if not offeneded, if not impressed by artists, who are either precieux or coercive, but if given the best object lessons will, in generations to come, want only the best."

LAWRENCE SEES POOR YEAR FOR DAN CUPID

Lawrence, Feb. 14.—St. Valentine's Day is a good old barometer of how Dan Cupid is going to run during the current year, according to traditions at the city clerk's office. If custom holds, this will be a comparatively poor year for marriages in Lawrence. Up to date there have been seventy-five couples wedded in 1921. Last year there were ninety.

There were 127 deaths in 1921 during the period against 149 last year. Births show the biggest decrease of all. Barring the month of January of this year there were but 146 births against 391 last year.

ONLY $40,000 MORE NEEDED FOR HOOVER

The $1,000,000 quota set for Massachusetts in the Hoover Drive for the starving people of Europe lacked but $40,000 of the total when the subscriptions were brought up to date Saturday in Boston. This announcement was made in a statement issued by John W. Hallowell, State chairman.

Mr. Hallowell stated that the drive had been an unqualified success and there is now on hand $960,446. Since the Hoover dinner in Boston on January 13, the fund has climbed to that total from $600,000, showing an increase of $350,000 in four weeks.

Hapgood Analyzes Foreign Policy

By NORMAN HAPGOOD,
Editorial Correspondent for the Boston American.

Norman Hapgood

Washington, Feb. 14.—Senator Medill McCormick has gone down to Florida to see President-elect Harding. The import of this fact you will readily grasp if you will realize that Senator McCormick has had more actual contact with Europe than any other Senator and that he has just returned to this country after intimate conversations with many of the leading men on the other side.

He is a good linguist and is exceptionally qualified to give Mr. Harding immediate light on conditions and needs. He has been thinking as well as observing.

I talked with Senator McCormick fully about his views on our foreign policy. The conversation covered so wide a range that I shall not undertake to quote him textually, although I am confident you will find no lack of accuracy in my summary, if you read every issue of the Congressional Record in the eventful days during which the new administration will be working out its foreign policy.

What the World Wants to Know.

Please do not be misled by the form I have adopted for today of telling the news. Do not go off and imagine I am printing opinions of my own. There is not one single line of my own opinion. To what extent I agree and to what extent I disagree is known only to me and my Maker.

No doubt, from time to time, in this Washington correspondence I shall express my own opinions, but not this time. It would be absurd, for what the world wants to know about our foreign policy is not my view but the views that are being presented to the President-elect and the views that are held by the men who will fight the matter out on the floor of the Senate.

So I just drop this hint not only to the reader but to another important force, the individual who writes the headlines. From time to time I shall want to use this method of telling important news that cannot fairly be put in direct discourse. It is done a good deal abroad, and it has its advantages.

Outstanding Views of McCormick.

Here are the outstanding principles:

1—Whatever we finally decide to do to help the reconstruction and the economies of Europe should only be done when we are fully assured that Europe will herself take the steps that are essential to recovery.

Senator McCormick therefore disagrees with Senator Borah's method of procedure. He agrees fully that armaments must be decreased if Europe is to escape bankruptcy but thinks it unwise to give up any of our weapons for forcing her into the right track. According to him it is altogether a mistake to believe that she will be led into disarmament by our mere example.

It is not against us that the European nations are keeping up their armaments; France, for example, favors our making sure of a naval parity with England, because she believes that the diplomatic and economic equipoise of the world be better maintained than by the single naval preponderance of England. One can see why France would not want to be in the relation to Great Britain that Austria was to Germany.

Should Keep Full Naval Program.

We should keep our full naval program until England agrees to our terms. She is certainly in a state of mind where she will agree to a building program that will result in our being on a naval equality with her. She will probably agree also not to make ships for other countries.

This would go far to solve the situation between us and Japan as Japan has not the steel to build for herself. Senator McCormick did not speak of it but it occurs to me to mention in this connection that three battle cruisers now being built in England are believed to be for Japan.

2—It is conceded by all persons adequately conversant with world complications that Europe cannot get on her feet unless she has the help of the United States. This help should be given only to help along methods that are sound. There is no sense in helping Szecho-Slovakia to maintain an army of 250,000 men when she ought not to have more than 50,000.

The German indebtedness ought to be put in such a form that preferred securities prior to the reparations claims can be sold like receivers' certificates. In that case there would be no difficulty in her getting those things which are necessary to her recovery and the recovery of central Europe: Cotton, copper, leather and food. The other essentials, such as ores, she can get within her own borders or from Austria. There is no use trying to help southeast Europe unless it gives up the business of building obstacles to business.

Economic Problems to Be Unraveled.

One example will suffice. Before the war the Sudbahn, the great Austrian railway to Trieste, was one of the best systems in the world. Today part of it is controlled and operated by Italy, part by Jugo-Slovia, part by Austria, part by Hungary, part by Czecho-Slovakia. Not only are there absurd tariffs, but there are regulations actually forcing cars to be unloaded and reloaded at the frontier. Inefficiency in other was correspond.

Some plan must be worked out by which the economic systems of this part of Europe can be made sane. For example, Mr. Hines, former Director-General of our railways, is now in Paris. With the aid of the engineers who are in Europe under Mr. Hoover a railway system could be started right. Such a move would not result in much recovery next Summer. It is too late, but a magic difference would be seen by the Summer after.

There is no reason that goods should not be sent in bond from all these regions, and later from Odessa, without being touched, through warehouses in Trieste, to any part of the world. Thus would the ores of Austria and the food of Russia find their proper outlet.

Every European Land in Danger.

So much for the general principles. The details, of course, are infinite. A thousand bridges are to be built in Poland, to say nothing of all her other needs. There is not a country in the continent that is not in danger, and in eastern and southeastern Europe there is scarcely one of the foundations of economic life that does not need to be built anew. It is disarmament or bankruptcy. Also it is American aid or bankruptcy. That is our responsibility and our opportunity.

Senator McCormick, as he put it, is no pacifist, he is a realist, and these general truths are not denied anywhere abroad. France is getting over her imperialism. She is a nation of soldiers, but she is coming to realize what faces her if recovery is not started. England sees and thinks in terms of economic reality. To bring about recovery by our help she will not only make satisfactory naval arrangements but such matters as the division of the oil supply can also be adjusted. What lies behind the expression "an Association of Nations" is some such arrangement for economic salvation.

LLOYD GEORGE TO FACE NEW TEST OF STRENGTH

Irish Question First on Slate of Parliament Which Reopens Tomorrow

London, Feb. 14—Domestic and international problems of transcending importance will confront Parliament when it is convened tomorrow with a speech from the throne after a recess since December 23, 1920. Premier Lloyd George will face a new test of its political strength and it is certain that the new session will mark the beginning of a great struggle between the Tories and Liberals for control of the coalition government.

Political adherents of the Premier claim that his position has been strengthened by the decision of the interallied Supreme Council to impose more than $56,000,000,000 indemnity upon Germany.

Issues that are pending between Great Britain and the United States make it virtually certain that a considerable portion of the parliamentary debate will have an "American angle."

OR NEW AMENDMENTS.

But first and foremost in the business on the parliamentary slate is the Irish situation. Officials of the Irish office have frankly admitted that the Irish question will be reopened and that Commons will be asked to put new amendments upon the Partition act (the Irish home rule law) that will make it more acceptable to the Irish people as a whole. Since the Partition act was passed and made effective the government has made little if any progress in establishing its provisions in Ireland. The Irish situation promises to provide plenty of fireworks in the debate in Commons.

It is a foregone conclusion that interpellations from members of Commons will result in formal statements and debates upon the following matters:

1—Anglo-American relations and the result of the conferences which Sir Auckland Geddes, the British ambassador to Washington, held with members of the British governement.

ALLIED WAR DEBTS.

2—The status of the proposals for cancellation of the allied war debts, including the vast sums which are owed by Great Britain and other allied powers to the United States.

3—Great Britain's intentions in the Near East, especially in Mesopotamia.

4—An explanation of the break off in negotiations between Great Britain and Soviet Russia for opening of commercial relations.

5—Great Britain's attitude towards Germany if the Germans fail to carry out the allies' disarmament demands.

6—Measures to alleviate British unemployment.

7—The budget.

It is more than likely that the Foreign Office will be asked for a statement upon several matters involving the United States. One of these will be the proposal for an international conference either this year or next to bring about a "holiday" in the construction of naval armaments. Some members are also anxious to learn if England's alliance with Japan is having any effect upon the good relations between this country and America.

Complexions—Night and Noon

Almost any woman can look pretty at night, but only perfect, natural skins can face the glare of noon.

A radiant skin, healthy and glowing, is the very foundation of charm—and every woman can have one. Aids to beauty are many, but the essential is a thoroughly clean skin.

Good complexions call for soap

Beautifying cleanliness requires not only a clean surface, but also soap-cleansed pores. Such cleanliness calls for soap.

Dirt, oil and perspiration clog the skin. So does powder—so does rouge. At least once daily this accumulation should be removed. The best time is at night. Then for hours of sleep the skin has a chance to breathe.

Without such cleansing, glands and pores become enlarged and irritated. Their functions are retarded. Skins become coarse. Blackheads and blotches may follow.

Must be done with lather

This cleansing must be done with soap. There is no substitute. One must force lather into the pores, using a gentle massage. When that is rinsed out, the dirt and oil come with it.

A balmy lather needed

The study has been to produce a balmy, creamy lather. A lather that soothes while it cleanses. A lather which leaves the skin soft.

To do that, modern science has gone back to methods of 3,000 years ago. It employs a blend of palm and olive oils. Not as Cleopatra used them, but prepared in modern ways.

In Palmolive soap these matchless oils are perfectly combined. As a facial cleanser, the world has never found anything better. And it probably never will.

Palmolive cleans the skin with a gentle and soothing emollient. It leaves the skin in blooming, fresh condition. Its daily use is the foundation of skin beauty. Its every application penetrates the skin with the most beneficial oils of the ages.

If the skin is very dry, apply cold cream before and after washing. The soap will make a balmy lather. Rub it gently into the pores. Rinse out with warm water, then apply a dash of cold water as a tonic.

Then you have done the utmost, beyond good food, fresh air and exercise, to beautify the skin.

The Palmolive Company, Milwaukee, U. S. A.
The Palmolive Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Why only 10 cents

We bring palm oil from Africa, olive oil from Spain. They are the costliest and the best oils a facial soap can employ. Yet Palmolive sells for 10 cents. The reason lies in enormous production. Millions use Palmolive. And our effort for many years has been to place it within everybody's reach.

Supreme for 3,000 years

Egyptian beauties used palm and olive oils. Roman beauties used them in their famous baths. As skin cosmetics, palm and olive oils have for ages stood supreme. But in olden times only the favored few could get them. And none could get them in this ideal form.

NEW YORK ACTS TO BAR BOSTON IMMIGRANTS

Aliens Here on Diverted Liners Are Feared as Typhus Menace

to New York, and, secondly, the question is asked what kind of staff the railroads are going to maintain to prevent suspects from boarding their trains.

Because New York is congested with steamers bearing thousands of passengers from the typhus-infected area of Central Europe, some ships are being diverted to Boston.

STEAMSHIPS TO DOCK.

Three steamers will dock here within the next few days. They are:

Red Star liner Finland, from Antwerp.

White Star liner Canopic, from Genoa and Naples.

Italian liner Re d'Italia, Scandinavian-American liner United States, from Copenhagen.

Approximately 3,000 passengers are on these ships and preparations are being made at quarantine island and the immigration station for making a thorough examination of all would-be immigrants.

Dr. William M. Ryan, in charge of medical inspection at Gallup's Island, said today that no difficulty is expected in taking care of the immigrants.

"It is ridiculous for any one to say that Boston will be infested with germ-bearing immigrants," said Dr. Ryan. "I would not say that we never miss a case, but the examination made here at quarantine and later by the immigration staff under Dr. Nute, make them so few that I have never heard of any cases getting by us," he added.

THOROUGH EXAMINATION.

"It strikes me as ridiculous that Dr. Copeland should try to prevent immigrants landing here from going by train to New York. Certainly he knows that a thorough examination of each immigrant is made before he is allowed to land.

"We can take care of about 1,500 cases here at quarantine, and if necessary we can prevent passengers from landing until they are examined on the ships."

Acting Immigration Commissioner Chester Macomber said today that he contemplates no difficulty in handling the thousands of immigrants scheduled to arrive here shortly to relieve congestion at New York.

Dr. William C. Woodward, Boston's commissioner of health, does not share the views of Dr. Copeland and Woodward deprecated fear on the part of the public that an epidemic might result from an influx of immigrants.

5 Garages, Total of Week's Building

Five garages represent all the new building applied for in Boston during the past week. Excepting for the week before when the building trades strike first had its effect, it was the dullest week in the building line that the city has known. The five garages are to cost a total of $9,300, one costing $5,000. No permits for dwellings or other construction were sought.

BANDITS FLEE AS FIRE ALARM IS SOUNDED

man fired at him and the car, without slackening speed, kept on. The officers followed them in the police car.

At the same time the Providence police car left that city to head the men off. Three inspectors in the car were armed with shotguns.

Patrolman Timothy Flynn of the Pawtucket police had been sent up the main road to Attleboro in the police motor patrol. At the Pawtucket line an automobile with five men approached at a rpid clip. Flynn in the patrol gave chase.

The officer overtook the other car at the corner of Broadway and Main street, Pawutcket. As Flynn and the driver of the motor patrol started the men to the police station two of them leaped from the car and escaped.

The Mansfield bank people accompanied by Mansfield police went to Pawtucket to see if the three men under arrest were the bandits who had held up the bank.

The robbers, according to the description given by Brunell, are shabily dressed and appear to be between the ages of twenty-four and thirty. The car, which is a Stutz, is a Providence car and is believed to have been stolen.

MRS. GENIE REED SMITH GOES ON TRIAL

Springfield Clubwoman Accused of Attempt to Kill Mother-in-Law

tion, while Attorney David Keedy appeared for the defence.

Mrs. Smith, who is the wife of Dr. Samuel Smith, well-known West Springfield dentist, was attractively gowned and apparently in the best of health and spirits. Attorney Keedy declared her to be confident of acquital.

The alleged assault occured at the Smith home on Park avenue, on October 19, 1919. Mrs Genie Smith was held in $10,000 for the Grand Jury the following January, and has been out under these bonds ever since.

Her mother-in-law, who it was alleged, she attempted to kill, was sixty-three years old at the time, and was in a serious condition for some weeks following the attack.

At a hearing in January Attorney Morrissey scored the defence witnesses as "prejudiceod" and declared Chief of Police Marshal A. Belmer had tried to "cover up" the defendant and her witnesses.

Judge Heady, however, took responsibility for the manner in which the chief handled the case, and said that he had advised Belmer not to proceed until Mrs. Smith, Sr., had recovered sufficiently from her wound to tell a connected story of the affair.

The court added that the denunciation of the deefnce witnesses was unwarranted, but that he himself did discount the testimony of the defendant, and of the physicians who had testified to belief that she was not mentally responsible for the act.

He further denied that the police chief was influenced by pressure from a Masonic lodge based on statements that both the chief and Dr. Smith were Masons.

Water Project May Abolish 8 Towns

Athol, Feb. 14.—The proposal to eliminate forever such old-time towns and villages as Millington, North Dana, Greenwich and Greenwich Village, Smiths, Enfield and one or two smaller places to make way for the large water extension between Enfield and Dana, has aroused the wrath of the towns affected, and a determined fight will be waged to prevent the action.

The plans for the water extension, according to one familiar with the project, call for the water to reach the level, and in some instances over, the new Salem station, thus making it necessary to do away with the towns mentioned.

SPIRITISM NOT PROVED, SAYS FLEISCHER

Tells Unity Church Gathering "Will to Believe Has Deceived Believers"

"Spirituality is a proven quality in our human make up which argues a certain potency in human beings that relate him with the manifold possibilities of the infinite universe," declared Dr. Charles Fleischer, speaking to the congregation in the Rev. Dr. Wiggin's Unity Church meeting at Jordan Hall on "Spiritualism and Spirituality."

Dr. Fleischer declared that nothing in all the history of mankind had developed any "objective proof of spirit revival, or even such evidence as would be acceptable to the open-minded man who is not already a believer.

"The will to believe," he went on, "has deceived the believers, whereas even the will not to believe could not have prevented the conviction of the unbeliever, were subjective demonstration of immortality, a possibility or even a probability."

At the regular meeting of the Commons in Huntington Chambers' Hall on the subject "Why Not Use Your mind?" the same speaker said:

"Beyond the metaphysics of Christian Science and the new clap-trap of applied psychology there is a perfectly obvious valuation of the use of the mind. There is no need to think everything else out of existence, nor even to exaggerate the place of the mind in the human economy in order to appreciate the importance of rationality."

Sailors Want to Blow Up "Ghost Ship"

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 14. — The coast guards here aren't superstitious or anything like that but they are getting so worked up over the necessity for looking at the sails of the "ghost ship," Carrol A. Deering, that they want to blow her up with dynamite.

The Deering has been stranded on Diamond Shoals for two weeks and nothing has been heard of her captain and crew. When coast guards and salvage workers made their way on board they found the schooner entirely deserted.

And there she rides with her four sails set. The coast guards are tired of looking at her.

NEW ENGLAND TRADE REVIEW

Manufacturers Ask Protective Tariff

Delegations representing various New England industries—textiles, fish, jewelry, etc.—have been flocking to Washington lately to bring pressure to bear upon Congress for a tariff wall that will protect American capital and labor against foreign competition.

With mills here running on part time and thousands of workers idle, the dumping of goods here by foreigners in an increasing volume has given the tariff seekers plenty of ammunition to present to the national legislators. One of the postulates in the Republican platform has been a protective tariff, so that some remedial legislation is expected from the incoming administration. President-elect Harding has always been a strong advocate of high tariff.

WOOL DUTY SOUGHT.

Of course, there is not a little difference between some of the tariff legislation now focusing on Washington. Wool dealers, for example, are divided. Wool is at present on the free list. The break in wool prices has all but ruined the Western sheep raisers, and the demand for protection is strong from that quarter.

However, woolen cloth manufacturers would rather have the whole world to draw upon for raw material, with the idea of getting a price more favorable to them. On the other hand, the woolen manufacturers are clamoring for protection for the goods they sell.

The National Association of Wool Manufacturers has adopted resolutions calling upon Congress to put up bars against imports to "insure the capital and labor employed in the industries of this country against being overrun by foreign competition."

JEWELERS OFFER CASE.

The jewelry manufacturers have been in Washington presenting their case. New England leads the country in production of jewelry. Representatives of the New England Manufacturing Jewelers' and Silversmiths' Associations of Providence, R. I., are asking that the present rates of 50 and 60 per cent. ad valorem on jewelery be raised to 75 and 85 per cent.

The fish industry is also making itself heard. Gardner Poole, representing the United States Fisheries Association, entreats Congress to levy a duty of 1 per cent. a pound on fresh fish taken from coast salt water. Fish is now on the free list.

Many other industries could be mentioned. But the argument of all is the same. The American standard of living is so far above that of Europeans that many articles produced over there by cheap labor can be laid down cheaper on this market than domestic products.

The unequal money exchange rates also encourage purchases from abroad. During the war this country had no fear of foreign competition, but now that the war is over, Europe is geting back to work and making great sacrifices to regain world trade.

BUSINESS IMPROVING.

The business situation in New England is slowly but surely improving. The spurt in orders that came in January and resulted in many shoe factories and textile mills resuming, has not been fully maintained. A slight reaction has set in.

It was not expected that a business boom would set in and send prices immediately to the sky. After the drastic liquidation that set in the last half of 1920, smashing prices in many cases to pre-war levels, some backing and filling in orders was to be expected.

The more competent observers of the times agree that the worst has been seen and that business generally will gradually improve. Most of the New England textile mills and shoe factories are now operating, some of them on full time.

John Burke, formerly treasurer of the United States and now with Kardos & Burke, New York investment brokers, says in a review of the national situation:

"General business conditions undoubtedly show distinct improvement in most lines, but the resumption of activities is being undertaken cautiously. Buying consists of purchases for current needs. Factory operations are being undertaken to hold organizations together. This business may not be profitable, but it at least lays the foundation for further constructive work."

REFUSE ADJUSTMENT PLAN IN SHOE STRIKE

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 14. — State Labor Commissioner John S. B. Davie has been notified that the W. H. McElwain Company will not accept the plan for the adjustment of labor troubles at the Manchester shops of the company, which he submitted February 4. The striking shoeworkers have not yet acted upon the proposal. About 2,000 operatives are idle and pickets are stationed about the five shops of the company.

PEARSON SHOWS WHY NEW HAVEN REVENUE LAGS

Road Is Under $19,000,000 Handicap Compared to Systems West, He Says

E. J. Pearson, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, has issued a statement showing, in brief, why it is that the road, while it has increased its effectiveness and economy of operation, is still lagging behind Western roads in the matter of net revenue.

Much of what the statement covers was brought out at the hearing of the road's case before the Interstate Commerce Commission recently.

The discrepancy between the revenues of the New Haven and Western roads is declared to have been due to the cost of its proportion of distributive and terminal service, and because divisions of through rates has not kept pace with the cost of such service.

COST ROAD $15,000,000.

The statement declared further that this disparity has much more than absorbed the great improvement in capacity and economy of operation.

"If," says the statement, "the company's net earnings were in proportion to its gross earnings at the beginning of Federal control, its credit would be earning a substantial sum, available for a dividend."

Failure to include the road in the so-called Eastern Region division has cost the road approximately $15,000,000.

"If the New Haven had received, through divisions or otherwise," continues the statement, "the approximate amount of $15,600,000 and if the changes in costs and revenues had not occurred, it would have more than $6,000,000 surplus per annum under ordinary traffic conditions."

WORKING UNDER HANDICAP.

The statement estimates that the road is under a handicap of more than $19,000,000 in comparison with roads West, due to increased cost of transporting fuel, increases in the cost of fuel, material and labor and other factors.

Progressively increasing traffic of 35 per cent. in ton miles and 36 per cent. in passengers one mile, has been handled with an actual decrease approximating 6 per cent. in freight and passenger train miles and a decreasing trend in man hours, "an effective showing," says the statement, "of operating economy."

WRIGHT DENIES POLICE 'SPY' CHARGE

Hampden District Attorney Hurls Counter Charges in Springfield Police Row

Springfield, Feb. 14.—The status quo in the war between the office of District Attorney Charles H. Wright and the local police department was unchanged today.

Charges and counter-charges have been hurled in verbal barrages, the unpleasantness dating from the official investigation of the police department started by the District Attorney.

District Attorney Wright was accused of having offered money and preferment to Patrolman Arthur C. Clifford to secure evidence of graft and wrongdoing in the department.

The district attorney hotly denied this charge, and declared he proposed "to do whatever seems to be right and expedient" in pressing his investigation.

A short time previously Captain of Detectives Frank W. Quilty had countered on some of his alleged accusers by charging Attorney Charles J. Weston of No. 4 Dorchester street and Attorney Horace E. Allen of No 170 Long Hill with attempting to "frame him" because they get but little of the police court practice.

Quilty also named Weston and Allen as the authors of the now famous "Kaganovitz" letter, an anonymous epistle published by a Springfield paper, which resulted in the investigation being started.

Joseph B. Ely, former district attorney, denounced the entire affair as "disgraceful and unheard of." He gave the police department a clean bill of health and characterized the present investigation as a lawyers' war. It was said that sentiment among the legal profession is in favor of bringing disbarment proceedings against Attorneys Weston and Allen.

"I am perfectly satisfied to leave the police probe to the city council and district attorney," said Attorney Weston when questioned. Asked if he denied authorship of the Kaganovitz letter he said: "I deny nothing."

Attorney Allen was equally reticent. "I believe," said he, "that the investigation to be undertaken by the city council committee and the district attorney will be fairly and ably conducted, and that my entering into a discussion at this time would be ill advised."

Charles F. Spellman, chairman of the Board of Police Commissioners, in commenting on the Clifford story said:

"The office of the district attorney has nothing to do with any promotions. The offer could never bear fruit. Any one familiar with civil service laws knows that. Patrolman Clifford knew it and as for other rewards being offered I won't say what I think."

Commissioner Silvio Martinelli also scored Wright's alleged promise of promotion. "It isn't within a hundred miles of his province to promote," said he. "He is not connected with the Police Department. Promotion depends on the civil service and the Board of Police Commissioners who are appointed by the Mayor."

The district attorney, in his own defence, said; referring to the Clifford story: "The statement of a prisoner referred to was shown to Captain Quilty by me in my office. I questioned a police officer in regard to it. If any promises have been made to this officer they have not been made by me or my office."

BOSTON RECORD RAISES ITS PRICE TO TWO CENTS

The Boston Record today announced that beginning tomorrow the price of the paper would be two cents. This is an increase in price of 100 per cent.

In announcing the change in price the Record said today:

"When The Record on December 13 last reduced its price to one cent per copy the publishers knew what conditions as to costs were. It was hoped that a recession in newsprint cost would follow the very marked decrease in prices of basic materials used in other lines of business. The Record, therefore, was willing to carry the burden of considerable losses for a time and has done so. It is not a good business policy to continue so to do in the face of conditions which show no evidence of changing in the very near future."

Will Hike to Baltimore

Miss Anita S. Hoffman of Wollaston, who will walk from Boston to Baltimore to prove that a woman can hike just as far as a man.

Miss Anita S. Hoffman of No. 292 Billings road, Wollaston, proposes to walk from Boston to Baltimore to prove her theory that a woman's endurance is as strong as a man's.

She is not a professional walker and therefore she is looking for suggestions. She wants to know just what kind of clothes she ought to wear on her trip; how many miles a day she should travel and what is the best route to take. She is hoping that old-timers at the walking game will help her out.

"Housewives walk several miles a day doing their daily housework, and this fact does not seem to be appreciated," she said, in explaining her theory. "If a woman walked the same distance in a straight line she would cover considerable ground. I want to test this theory in a straight cross-country walk."

Miss Hoffman, who is thirty-two years old, is a bookkeeper but declares that she spends several hours a day walking. She decided that she could walk as far as the average man when in the Summer she climbed Mount Caribou in Maine.

WATERTOWN FIREMAN FALLS DOWN STAIRWAY

Hoseman Ward Lane of the Watertown fire department received painful injuries early today when he fell down a stairway in the Phillips Congregational Church, Mount Auburn street, Watertown. The presence of the firemen at the church resulted from a false alarm. The "smoke" proved to be steam from a radiator.

TWO ARRESTED FOR ASSAULT ON OFFICER

Lawrence, Feb. 14.—John O'Neill and Fred Collins were arrested today charged with disorderly conduct, drunkenness and assault on Patrolman Alphonse Marquis. The arrests followed an attempt on the part of the men to get money from the officer, who was in civilian clothes.

FOREIGN DEBT IS MENACE, SAYS HAMMOND

Better to Cancel Obligations Than Accept Products in Payment, He Declares

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 14.—"As a great creditor nation we are faced with the danger of being impaled upon one of the two horns of the dilemma in the liquidation of Europe's indebtedness to United States," said John Hays Hammond, who is spoken of as a Cabinet possibility, in an address on "The business and industrial outlook" before the National Civic Federation here today."

"Europe cannot pay even the interest upon our loans in gold nor would the payment in gold be altogether to our advantage. If we accept the products of Europe in payment we must greatly curtail the operation of our own mills, involving widespread unemployment and consequent industrial distress. It would be even better for us to cancel our European debts than risk this danger, and, of course to this we object. On the other hand, if we place an embargo on the products of our allies they will not be able to repay their loans.

WOULD AVOID DANGER.

"Wise statesmanship will not erect an impenetrable tariff wall, but a tariff which, while providing for the admission of those products of Europe having a stabilizing influence on our own commodity price levels, will at the same time avoid the danger of irreparable damage to our own incomparable market, a market which absorbs 90 per cent. of the products of American industry and which is the keystone of our commercial supremacy. Fortunately there is a growing disposition to regard the tariff as an economic rather than a political issue.

"When once the indemnity is fixed upon the proper basis the allies and Germany will be in the same boat, rowing to the same goal and, therefore while the aim of the allies should be to render Germany impotent from a military point of view, it should also be to strengthen her economic position."

Turning to the influx of immigration which has followed the war, Mr. Hammond said:

ALIENS AND FOREIGN TRADE.

"We realize more clearly than ever the paramount importance of restrictive and selective legislation. This, of course, does not imply the exclusion of all immigrants, but regulation as to the number to be admitted. The policy of foreign trade is directly related to that of immigration.

"We should dispel the illusion that the paramount aim of our industrial development is the expansion of our foreign trade.

"The development of a nation's capital abroad is the best means of developing its foreign trade, for trade follows a nation's dollars just as it follows the national emblem."

CROWN PRINCE, IN LOVE, DEFIES JAP CLANS

Proposed Wedding and Trip to U. S. Involved in Factional Strife

By International News Service.

Tokio, Feb. 14.—The Japanese court cabal warfare involving Crown Prince Hirohito's love affair with Princess Nagako, and the possible downfall of the "clan system" in the imperial government, resulted today in the resignation of Prince Yamagata as president of the Privy Council. The resignation was sent to the emperor.

Prince Yamagata has opposed the betrothal of the Crown Prince and Princess Nagako ever since it was announced. This matrimonial alliance would unite the Satsuma clan with the imperial family and give it tremendous power in the government. But, despite the opposition of Prince Yamagata the young Crown Prince—he is not yet twenty-one—is standing by his guns.

The imperial household issued formal notice that the Crown Prince would carry out his plans for his marriage "despite the opposition to it and despite the opposition to his proposed trip abroad." The Crown Prince is going to the United States.

In political circles it was said that Prince Yamagata's resignation may be precursor to others and that eventually the controlling clan system would be deposed entirely.

The governmental and court struggle between the opposing clans, which seems to be fast approaching its climax, may result in the establishment of a regency during the illness of Emperor Yoshihito Harunomiya, who has long been incapacitated and unable to attend to state affairs. Not only domestic matters but international issues are bound up in the outcome of the intrigue.

Prince Yamagata is leader of the powerful Chosu clan. For six years he has been virtual arbiter of the destinies of the empire. Princess Nagako is the daughter of a leader of the Satsuma clan, which has been waging relentless war against the Chosu clan.

The proposed trip of the Crown Prince to Great Britain and the United States is being vigorously opposed. Six members of the Diet announced their intention of addressing a memorial to the crown for the establishment of a regency if the Crown Prince carries out his plans to go abroad.

In this connection it is expected that a resolution will be introduced in the Diet asking for a "revision" of the Crown Prince's future program.

"Suck a Button" to Cure Headache

Have you tried the new headache remedy?

All you have to do is suck a button. Any kind, size or color will do. Dr. William E. Chenery, professor at Tufts Medical School, told a class all about the new cure. He said that while at the theatre one evening the wife of a friend complained of headache. "My friend took a button out of his pocket" said the professor, "and told his wife to put it in her mouth. She did so. A little later her husband asked her how the headache was and she said it had disappeared. He then told her to take out of her mouth what he had given her as it was only a button."

LEAGUE WARNED SWITZERLAND WILL QUIT

To Withdraw if Council Insists Troops Be Permitted to Pass

Paris, Feb. 14.—Switzerland threatened today to withdraw from the League of Nations if the allies insisted that the troops bound for the Vilna plebiscite zone should have free passage over Swiss soil.

The Swiss Minister to Paris, acting upon instructions from Berne, notified Gasta de Cunha, the Brazilian Ambassador to Paris and the President of the League of Nations Council, that Switzerland would follow the action of Argentine in quitting the League if the League of Nations Council, at its next meeting in Paris on February 21, insisted that Switzerland permit the Vilna plebiscite troops to cross Swiss territory on their way eastward.

Switzerland has sent a note to the allies explaining her difficult position. The Swiss government pointed out that Switzerland, like other nations in the League," is composed of groups of different nationalities holding dissenting opinions regarding the Vilna plebiscite.

The Swiss government expressed regret over its inability to comply with the allies' request for a free passage of troops, but contended that "there was no justification for stirring up a civil class on such grounds."

Switzerland announced specifically that she desired to retain her neutrality so far as military action was concerned although she was willing to obey the League's orders for economic pressure against recalcitrant nations.

Stocks Irregular; Money 7%; Sterling Advances

UNITED FRUIT IS NEW YORK FEATURE

Recedes Several Points and Is Active; Rails Rule Lower and Steels Quiet

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stock were irregular in New York at noon, but they were above the lowest price level of the morning. United Fruit featured the trading, being active for this issue and receding several points. Rails and coppers ruled lower, steels were quiet and showed small changes, but oils were rather strong. The market was quiet, first hour transactions aggregating 115,000 shares.

Call money opened at 7 per cent. Foreign exchange rates advanced, demand sterling at $3.88⅜ being at its highest since January 27.

MIXED MOVEMENT AT START.

The price movement was mixed at the opening, many issues being unchanged at first quotations and the balance of the list about equally divided between gains and losses, which were small in most instances. Sugars featured the early trading, being active for this class and fairly strong. Generally speaking, the market had a good tone at the start and before the end of an hour a higher level had been attained by most leaders. Reading, the most active rail, was fractionally lower. Carriers were the weakest group. High priced oil issues sold higher while low priced ones had an indefinite movement. Coppers had a heavy tone on the whole. Steels were quiet, but could be called firm. Little was done in equipments or motors. Tobaccos improved after the opening on a few transactions. Shipping shares ruled higher, but United Fruit receded.

STRONG SPECIALTIES.

The list included some strong specialties, General Asphalt, Linseed Oil and Famous Players showed as large gains as any of the usual leaders. Trading was quiet during the morning and market views were as diverse as fluctuations. It might be said, however, that traders are not as bearish as a class as at the beginning of the month. Borrowing demand for stocks was limited at the end of last week. The railroad situation is giving more concern than anything else. If the Winslow resolution providing for prompt treasury payments to the roads is passed this week this aid to carriers should give them better market standing. The increase in the reserve ratio of the Federal Reserve system from 49.3 to 49.6 inspired added confidence in the money outlook. The gain by New York, its ratio advancing from 38.1 to 39.4, was particularly satisfactory. Boston's ratio was 63.9 against 66.5.

Gasoline Consumption

It is estimated that gasoline consumption in this country by motor vehicles totaled 4,018,000,000 gallons in 1920, which represented an average consumption of 452.1 gallons per car. The refinery output was 4,870,000,000 gallons.

MIXED PRICES ON BOSTON EXCHANGE

Local Market Has a Heavy Tone During the Forenoon; Curb Leaders Improve

The majority of issues that figured in the opening of the Boston market were unchanged, while the remainder were irregular. Early business was of limited volume and fluctuations were small. The market was as lacking in breadth as for some time. Coppers were heavy on a few transactions. Rails had a downward tendency. Packing issues were too dull to establish a trend. Sugars ruled higher here. But American Sugar preferred was weak. Trinity was an unusually active issue and made a small gain. United Fruit was weaker here than in New York. declined nearly four points before noon. Calumet & Hecla dropped six points to 249 on a few sales.

Among issues to advance from one to three points were Ahmeek, Swift & Co., American Sugar common and Punta Alegre. New England Telephone advanced half a point to par. Among fractionally higher stocks were Boston Elevated, United Drug common and preferred, New Cornelia, Trinity and New River preferred.

American Sugar preferred receded 1½ and United Fruit 3⅜. Isle Royale, Boston & Maine C and Pacific Mills were down from one to two points. Small losses were sustained by American Telephone, Calumet & Arizona, Copper Range, North Butte, Waldorf, Swift International, National Leather, United Shoe, U. S. Smelting and New Haven.

CURB WAS IRREGULAR.

The Curb market was irregular and opened with a heavy tone. But it showed some improvement during the first hour. Early leaders were Boston & Montana, Daddy and Verde Mines. Strong stocks at the start included Pilgrim, Ranier and Allied Oil. Among weak ones were Alpha, Allied Mining, Denbigh, United Verde Extension and Verde Mines.

At the end of an hour Boston & Montana was up 1 cent at 70 cents, Daddy 2 cents at 20 cents, Cascade 2 cents at 23 cents, Pilgrim 4 cents at 9 cents, and Eureka 1-16 at 1⅛. Verde Mines was off 1 cent at 36 cents, Arizona Silver 1 cent at 24 cents, Denbigh 2 cents at 15 cents and Hecla Divide 1 cent at 6 cents.

Cotton Market Opening

New New York, Feb. 14.—The cotton market opened at a decline of 14 to 28 points. Selling was induced by weak Liverpool cables and further pessimistic advices form Manchester. Strength in the stock makret and foreign exchange, coupled with fairly active support from Wall Street sources quickly rallied quotations to within a few points of Saturday's close. Liverpool, the South and several of the spot firms, were among the principal sellers. Spot concerns also were buyers of March against sales of May. The Census Report showing 336,270 bales consumed by domestic mills during January compared with 591,723 bales in January a year ago was about in line with expectations. Opening prices were: March 13.35, May 13.80, July 14.17, October 14.68.

GOODHUE TELLS OF BIG FUTURE FOR COMMERCE

Outlines New Plans to Finance Growing Foreign Trade of America

BY BACHRACH
F. A. Goodhue.

"We are laying the cornerstone of a financial building that is to house the credit structure necessary for the tremendous foreign commerce America must build up in the future," explained F. Abbott Goodhue, vice-president of the First National Bank of Boston today in announcing the organization of the International Acceptance Bank, Inc., in New York.

Mr. Godhue, a Boston man and a graduate of Harvard and Andover, is to be president of the new gigantic banking corporation, and Paul M. Warburg, former head of the Reserve Bank, is to be the chairman of the board of directors of the new institution.

The new bank has a fully subscribed capital of $10,000,000 in common stock, $250,000 special stock, and a surplus, also subscribed, of $5,000,000.

"The International Acceptance Bank will devote itself primarily to financing this country's growing foreign commerce," went on Mr. Goodhue. "We expect to operate under the provisions of the reserve act, and are to be organized as a New York corporation.

"Instead of attempting to establish foreign branches, the new bank has obtained the co-operation and support of some of the oldest and most firmly established banks in Europe. These banks, which hold approximately one-third of the capital of the new institution, are situated in Amsterdam, Basle, London, Stockholm, Zurich and Buenos Ayres.

"Negotiations are under way to establish similar relations with banks in Paris, and it is planned to build up an advisory council in Europe, to give the American officers the benefit of their counsel and co-operation.

The Old Colony Trust Company of Boston is among the strongest of the banking institutions which have subscribed to the stock of the Acceptance Bank, and such men as Newcomb Carlton, president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, Robert F. Herrick of Herrick, Smith, Donald & Farley of Boston, and Daniel G. Wing, president of the First National Bank of Boston, are among the organizers and the first board of directors.

Arranagments have been made for the new bank to take over a part of the organization and the foreign credit business of the First National Corporation, New York, which is owned by the First National Bank of this city.

President Wing of the First National Bank, in commenting upon the announcement of the organization of the new bank, said that such an organization is needed to meet the problems raised by the growth of America's foreign commerce as an outcome of the World War.

"New England, with its great manufacturing enterprises, is particularly interested not only in the opening of foreign markets for its goods, but also in the proper financing of manufactured exports and raw material imports.

"It is this exactly that the new bank will offer, and our close association with the new institution will enable the First National Bank of Boston to exetnd all these facilities to its New England customers. I believe that this bank will prove an important constructive step in the development of New England trade and commerce."

COX AND PETERS APPROVE DRIVE FOR WELLESLEY

Governor and Mayor Both Hope College Will Raise $2,700,000 Fund

The drive, started today by Wellesley College, for an endowment fund of $2,700,000 has received the warm endorsement of both Governor Cox and Mayor Peters.

Governor Cox declares the college has done a "splendid work in developing Massachusetts," and hopes that the fund campaign will be a success.

His letter follows:

"It is my sincere belief that Wellesley College had done a splendid work in developing the human resources of Massachusetts. It is the kind of work which must be continued.

"I hope the endowment fund campaign may be an entire success and that Wellesley College may be enabled to fulfill in a larger measure than ever before its important mission."

In a letter to the committee Mayor Peters said:

"I am very happy to give my endorsement to the campaign which Wellesley College, one of the oldest and largest women's colleges in the United States is starting for an endowment fund of $2,700,000.

"Boston has always taken a friendly pride in the success of this great institution, an important link in the educational chain for which our city is justly famous, and I know the citizens of Boston will respond generously to the plea for financial support."

HARVARD TO STAGE "THE LATE MR. KIDD"

"The Late Mr. Kidd" is the title of the Pi Eta musical comedy just accepted for production by that Harvard fraternity. The book is by Walbert B. Leach, Jr., of Brookline, who has furnished some of the lyrics and music. Malcolm H. Dill, Lewis A. Harlow, Winslow A. Duerr and Harry K. Behn, Jr., are interested in the composition of the comedy. Rehearsals will start tonight.

I., Feb. 14.—Four boys, all under fifteen years of age, are returning to Providence today from New York, to which city they were carried in a freight car which was locked while they were playing inside in the New Haven yards. The boys, Joseph McGuire, Peter Malley, Hugh Donnelly and Frank Cropper, were imprisoned in the car for twenty-four hours.

WENDELL'S PORTRAIT NOW IN FACULTY ROOM

A portrait of the late Professor Barrett Wendell of Harvard, who died last Tuesday, has been hung in the historic faculty room in University Hall along with the portraits of bygone presidents, benefactors and scholars of Harvard. The painting now takes a place in the faculty room next to that of William James. On the same wall of the room hangs the portraits of James Russell Lowell, Professor Sophocles, William Watson Goodwin, Longfellow, Dean Shaler and Benjamin Pierce.

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Four games are billed for the local Arena this week, while a fifth is possible if the St. Patricks of Ottawa can be held in town until tomorrow night.

The first of the four already scheduled comes this evening in the second meeting of Harvard and the St. Pats, and inasmuch as their first get-together produced one of the neatest demonstrations of skillful ice play seen this season, and was decided in the St. Pats' favor only because Jabish Holmes, the Harvard goal tend, carelessly knocked the disc into his own net, tonight's meeting offers much that should prove attractive to local fandom.

A possible second contest of the week would bring together the St. Pats and the B. A. A. on Tuesday evening, but this game is not yet closed and there is considerable doubt whether the Canadians can remain another day in Boston.

Loss of Downing Is Blow to Unicorns

Although tonight's Harvard-St. Patrick's contest promises thrilling hockey and will bring out a banner crowd, the big game of the week is the Thursday night league battle between the Unicorns and the Cobblers.

On the result of this game will be determined whether or not the Shoe Trades array is to remain in the race for the Eastern title. The New York and Philadelphia league teams have proved no match for the Boston sextets, and are through as possible champions. The Shoe Trades outfit lost its initial league game to the Unicorns, and must win on Thursday night to even matters with the B. A. A.

Shoe Trades is generally favored to win the game. The acquisition of Dufresne; the remarkable improvement in combination play, and the brilliant net-guarding efforts of "Fat" Storey, combined with a general speeding up of all the players, has chanaged the entire aspect of the league and Winsor Cup Series, while the Cobblers' chances have been further enchanced by the resignation of Frankie Downing from the B. A. A. team.

Cruse Gets in Touch With Braves' Boss

By SAM P. CARRICK.

Baseball players are always right just before the Spring training season.

When they are not writing in to that effect to the club they are getting some newspaper man in the old home town to put the glad information on the wire.

The latest (it may be said in passing the only item for a long, long time) from Sylacauga, Ala., runs to the effect that Walton Cruise has fully recovered from the injury he suffered last season and expects to depart for the Braves' camp in Galveston tomorrow.

What Walton intends to do down in the Texas seaside city for the next three weeks, for it will be about that long before his teammates join him, we are not informed

May Be Hunting Movie Houses

Perhaps he wants to find out just where the movie houses are located so he will know where to rest up after the strenuous practice sessions to be ordered by Manager Mitchell.

However, Walton is right; that is the main thing. With Cruise in perfect shape Mitchell will have little to worry about in his outfield, as the former Cardinal is just about fifty per cent. of the whole garden group on defence and still more on the attack when he is his real self.

Cruise's Good Condition Doesn't Help Infield, Though

But Cruise's good condition, however much it may benefit the outfield, is of no assistance to the Braves' inner defence, and there, just at present, the team is weaker than it has been for many seasons.

Holke, on first, is an average performer. He can and does get get most of the balls thrown to him by his fellow infielders; is reasonably sure to get most of the grounders which come his way and covers a moderate amount of ground when pursuing flies, fair and foul.

But he is no better in these respects than most of the other big league initial sackers and not so good as several who might be mentioned.

Second Base Is One of Mitch's Problems

Who Manager Mitchell intends to play at second base is not known. Probably Manager Mitchell has not yet decided, but it looks like Barbare, with Christenbury as the first string sub.

It is useless to attempt to figure how either man will perform. Each had a few opportunities at the keystone sack last year, but neither did enough work to give any very good line on his ability in that position.

Ford is the most likely of the candidates for shortstop. He played there while a member of the Tufts team and performed in a very few games for the Braves in that position. But it is hardly likely he will come anywhere near filling Maranville's shoes.

Boeckel looks like the third baseman just now. He is virtually certain of the job if Barbare is placed on second, but may lose out to the former Pirate if Christy lands the keystone job.

Put briefly, the Braves' infield is going to be just as strong as it was in 1920 whenever the Rabbit was not playing. Which wasn't a world beater, the whole world will admit.

Stories of Famous Fights

Neil Knocks Out Tenny

THIS is the thirty-fifth of a seriers of "Old-Time Fights," written by authorities who were famous in their day. Others will follow.

Today's tale is of the night in San Francisco when Frankie Neil cinched his claim to the bantamweight title. He met Harry Tenny and in the fourteenth round knocked him out.

To make the battle more realistic and memorable Neil knocked out his opponent twice. The fight was staged at Mechanics Pavilion, February 28, 1906.

By W. W. Naughton

Frankie Neil knocked out Harry Tenny in the fourteenth round at Mechanics Pavilion last night, and then, so as to make sure that there would be no flaw in his title as bantam champion, knocked him out again.

It was this way: That Tenny was done for was palpable when he came up for the final round. He backed to the ropes under a battery of ripping left handers which caught him in the stomach. His body began to sink and he shook his head as though whispering his distress to himself.

Neil Sends Tenny to Floor.

He sidled wearily along the ropes and Neil made him curl up with a left to the stomach and another under the chin. As he lay there Official Timekeeper George Harting counted—one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, out. As he shouted the word "Out," Tenny had his legs gathered under him and a second later he was standing in a drooping position.

Referee Roche gave no signal that he had heard Harting's count so Neil rolled into Tenny again and flogged him across corner to corner where Tenny went down under another assortment of lefts. This time Roche took the counting into his own hand as poor Tenny coiled up like a pea in a pod. The referee gave the official distinction to his own count by slapping Neil on the shoulder.

Tenny Drops Neil Early.

Neil won from start to finish. The only chance for a little division came in the seventh round when Tenny whipped his right across and landed it after rounds and rounds of trying. Frankie was sent down but was up in a flash and went along with his work in the same careful fashion that he began.

Next Story—Heenan Wins World's Title.

Their Favorite Sport--and Why

No. 13

HENRY G. LAPHAM,
President of the B. A. A.

My favorite sports are ice hockey and billiards.

There is no speedier, more skillful or more exciting game in the world than hockey. It provides me with more thrills to the minute than any other athletic activity, and that does not mean that I dislike or fail to appreciate the fine points of football, baseball, track athletics and the many other sports which go to make up America's most interesting athletic curriculum.

However, being somewhat above the age when one can participate in such a taxing pastime, I find billiards the pleasantest sport in which I actually engage. Give me an opponent of about my own class, my favorite cue, and you can take it for granted that I am thoroughly enjoying myself until the last point has been clicked off.

Title to Elmwood

The Elmwood ice polo team of Providence won the New England championship by defeating the Topsails, 2 to 1, at Wollaston.

Norwood Strong Boy to Wrestle Burns

There is special interest in Norwood in the wrestling matches to be held there in Everett Hall this evening, as Cyclone Burns, light heavyweight champion, who meets Ole Jacobson, Norwood's "strong boy," was for several years a resident of Norwood and is very popular there.

In the other match John Makie of Norwood, who holds the world's lightweight championship belt, will meet Axel Johnson, Scandinavian lightweight champion.

LONDON AND CADDOCK IN MAT BOUT TONIGHT

New York, Feb. 14—Earl Caddock, the man of "One Thousand Holds," and Jim London, the Greek wrestling champion, are ready for their struggle on the mat tonight at the 71st Regiment Armory for the light heavyweight championship. To make the event a stellar one in the world of wrestling, Stanislaw Zbyszko will meet John Freyberg. Both of these matches will go to a finish.

HUTCHINS FAVORED TO DEFEAT KELLOGG

Constantine Hutchins of the Tennis and Racquet Club was made favorite over Dr. Foster S. Kellogg of the Harvard Club in the final round match for the championship of the Massachusetts Squash Racquet Association played today at the Union Boat Club.

FIRST TROOP SCORES AT COMMONWEALTH ARMORY

GOULA AND VETO TO BATTLE IN MARIEVILLE

Mack Murphy and Mike Scrola to Meet in National A. C. Semi-Final Bout

Providence, Feb. 14—Young Goula, former State welterweight champion, will meet Johnny Veto of Chelsea, in the feature bout at the National A. C. in Marieville tomorrow evening.

Goula has completely recovered from an attack for malaria and expects to be in his old time form when he meets the hard hitting boy from Chelsea. The two are booked for twelve rounds. There will also be three ten-round goes.

Mack Murphy of Atlantic and Mike Scrola, both 128-pounders, are matched for the semi-final. Both are sluggers and hard hitters and a hard fight is anticipated.

Frankie Ryan of Pawtucket and Barney Rivers of Woonsocket will also swap punches. Each has a decision over the other and will try to settle the argument as to whom is the best man. Kid Kansas of this city and Red Chapman of Boston are set down for the curtain raiser.

GUILFORD WINS FINAL GOLF ROUND AT MIAMI

Miami, Fla., Feb. 14—Jesse Guilford of the Woodland Club, Newton, Mass., defeated Leo Chase of the Park Club, Buffalo, N. Y., 1 up (nineteen holes) in the final round of the annual invitation tournament. Par, or better, was needed to win or tie every hole.

Featherweights in Title Go at Triple A Friday Night; Jack "Twin" to Box Thomas

By JACK CONWAY.

The best of our local amateur boxers will compete in the big tourney to be staged by the Massachusetts Department of the American Legion at Scenic Temple tonight. A bulky entry list has been received and as a result the fans are assured of some lively milling.

Besides the contests at 115, 125 and 140 pounds, there will be a special bout between Harry Sullivan of South Boston and Young Russell of the South End. These lads are rated among the leaders in "simon-pure" circles and are sue to furnish a lively battle.

Amateur boxing shows are drawing big crowds. This is due to the high grade of the bouts and the spirited competition. The boys always give the best they have every second they are in the ring. Tonight's show is sure to go over big.

Real Battle for Quincy Fans

Tom Goodwin has booked a real attraction for the Quincy Boxing Club for tonight. He has Young Gould of Brockton and Al Pangraze of Quincy booked to meet in the feature contst of ten rounds. Gould has engaged in several tussles in Quincy rings and has always given satisfaction. His rough, willing style of milling has won him plenty of supporters and also a flock of persons who would like to see him get knocked out. Inasmuch as Pangraze is one of those youths who packs a heavy wallop in each hand the contest tonight is liable to have an abrupt ending. There will also be an eight-round semi-final and a couple of sixes.

Triple A to Stage Big Show of Week

The big Boston show of the week will be staged by the Armory A. A. at Mechanics Building Friday night. Al Shubert, New England featherweight champion, will oppose Bobby Josephs, former title holder, in the feature contest of ten rounds. These youths recently battled ten sensational rounds at the Arena, Shubert grabbing a close decision. Josephs is now out to reverse things and win back his lost laurels. The Triple A originally planned to stage this match tomorrow night, but Shubert wanted more time to train. So the affair was shifted to Friday evening.

Shaver O'Brien, South Boston welterweight, will battle Harry Silva of the West End in a ten-round match at the same show. O'Brien, one of the best of our New England welterweights, has found it difficult to secure matches on account of the lack of courage among some of the men in his division. Silva, however, is confident he can wallop the South Boston boy.

Joey Dailey of Erie, Pa., and Young Epey of New York will mingle in another ten-round bout, while Mickey Kirst of St. Paul and Young Jimmy Gardner of Quincy will travel the eight-round distance.

Jack "Twin" to Meet Joe Thomas

The Commonwealth A. A. landed a fine attraction for its Saturday night show when it signed Jack (Twin) Sullivan of Cambridge to meet Joe Thomas of Diamond Hill in the feature tussle of ten rounds. Thomas, an old-timer, recently did a comeback, winning over Pat Delaney by the kayo route. Delaney, among other things, had stopped Jack Savage. As Sullivan won his last start by walloping George Robinson, the Commonwealth Club is sure to play to a capacity crowd. President Joe Sullivan announces that reservations may be secured at Scenic Temple during the week.

Harry Kid Brown to Box Harry Carlson

Harry (Kid) Brown of Philadelphia will be in our midst this evening once more. He is booked to meet Harry Carlson in the feature bout of ten rounds at the Carlyle A. C.'s show at the Grand Opera House.

Coast Gridders Anxious to Show in the East

By DAMON RUNYON.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 14—Mr. Bruckman poured indignation into our ear last evening. It was the indignation of the Native Son. Mr. Bruckman is a young man who is invested with historic trappings. He is the sporting editor of the Los Angeles Examiner.

It seems that Mr. Bruckman feels, in common with many other Californians, who have somehow taken us as the lawful agent of Eastern football, of which we probably know as little as anybody, and have taxed us about matter, that California football does not get all the credit that is coming on it.

In the New Year's game at Pasadena, the University of California walloped the daylights out of the Ohio State delegation in the presence of as many people as could get in one yard, but some Californians apparently feel that the feta has not been taken seriously enough.

The Californians want to see some representative Eastern college book their favorite team for a date back along the Atlantic coast so the Native Son's can show the Easterners just what's what.

They tried to get a game with Harvard, and several other big fish in the football pond, but the big colleges had already completed their schedules when California applied.

"What we want to see," said young Mr. Bruckman, "is our team playing back there where the East, or the Middle West, cannot bring in the old alibi of the change in the climate, or the long trip affecting their players.

"California loses only a few men this year. We have a great team, and we know it. We want to see it play Harvard, or Princeton, or Yale, or Pitt, or Penn State, or any of those colleges that have good football teams, just to show how good California is.

"Ohio State may have been affected to some extent by the trip and the climate, but it could hardly have been affected by the extent of that one-sided score unless California had some ability.

"However, we want to see our west-of-the-Rockies football system tried out where no alibi is possible."

It would seem that this is fair enough. All who saw that Pasadena game—and there were some sixty thousand who tried and did not—say that the Californians played remarkable football.

So far they have not landed an Eastern date, but Notre Dame may come out here for a post-season event.

SPEED SKATERS TO SHOW AT ARENA FRIDAY NIGHT

Many of the leading speed skaters in this section will compete in the half mile race to be held Friday night at the Arena in connection with the Ellis Memorial Skating Carnival.

So much dissatisfaction was expressed over the conduct of the recent outdoor races at Brookline that the Ellis Memorial committee felt that their carnival offered a good opportunity to determine the local champion for a half mile. This race will hold a conspicuous place in the long list of events arranged.

Wrestlers Yet to Decide on Referee

The question of who will referee the match between Waino Ketonen and Pinky Gardner for the world's middleweight wrestling championship, will not be decided until tomorrow afternoon when Promoter Tunney will return from New York, where he is in conference with some of the world's leading wrestlers and to watch the Caddock-London match tonight.

Pady Hebir has always felt that a neutral man should referee when Ketonen wrestles, as both come form Worcester. Gardner is satisfied with Hebir, but agrees with Paddy that if possible a neutral official should be chosen.

Harvard Oarsmen Out

Harvard oarsmen were called out today by Coach Bill Haines. Heber Howe and Burt Haines are to coach the yearlings, Haines confining his attention to the varsity.

This Day in Our History—February 14, 1921

THIS is the anniversary of the death, in 1891, of William Tecumseh Sherman, the general who made the famous march to the sea in the Civil War and later was made head of the army. Sherman ranks as one of the ablest of military men.

St. Valentine's Day

THE day was long observed in honor of seven martyrs of the church, but later it became famous as a lovers' festival, a survival of the Roman Lupercalia. Mention of it is found in the writings of the English poet, Chaucer.

CHAPTER VII.

Of Friendship, Love and the Job of Living

THEY had breakfast at the Rivoli.

"Finished up in Cincinnati yesterday noon," said Humphrey. He had had to make talk all the way in on the street cars. "It gave me a little extra time, so I ran up here."

Henry gloomily sipped his coffee.

"Fact is"—Humphrey clipped an imported cigar—"that little chat of ours the other night struck me as curiously unsatisfactory."

Henry bowed over his cup.

"Of course, Hen—we've seen so little of each other these recent years, and we've been going on in our separate roads—there would be a little adjusting to do. We'd have to find each other out, as we're doing now. Friends have to allow for that, of course, as time goes along."

"Been thinking you over, Hen. You mustn't mind. But first. . . . Look here, tell me a little about yourself—what you're dong, how you're living."

"There's darn little to tell."

"I'm going to talk right out. I want to help you, Hen. And it's—well, difficult. You are the most gifted man I've ever known. You're young. How old? Twenty-eight—nine——"

"Twenty-seven," Henry mumbled.

"Good Lord! That's only the beginning of things! And you've got as much health as a man needs. I doubt if you've been eating just right, but that isn't serious at your age. I don't think you've ever done much of any drinking, have you?"

Henry's head moved in the negative.

"Well, there we are! But you look—I'm talking out—all in, seedy. Now tell me, how far have you gone with this false name, this 'Stafford' thing?"

Henry's hand moved in an uncomfortable little gesture. "It's my name here," he replied. "It's all they know about me."

"Well—I don't know as that matters much. It hasn't gone far. I've come over here, Hen, with the idea of suggesting that you let me in on it."

"How—how do you mean?"

"Oh, do the sensible thing—let you have a little money, put you somewhere out in the country where you can work outdoors and write if you——"

Henry's hand waved again, listlessly. "I've done all that, Hump. It's no good. Just means debts, and too much thinking."

"But anyway, just as a start, I want to get you away from this town. It looks like a false start to me."

"They've all been false starts, Hump." Then the memory of something he had felt so strongly years ago, and again, unexpectedly, rather wonderfully, only a few hours ago, in this very restaurant, gathered strength among his thoughts, gathered strength enough, indeed, to override momentarily the depression Humphrey's appearance had caused—a sensation that had been intensified by the steady intent look of prosperity in the man's strong face, by the cut of his imported clothes, his silk-and-gold watch-fob, his heavy silk tie, the Havana cigar he was smoking, the money he was so easily spending on this rather elaborate breakfast.

"Last night a big thing happened, Hump. I did a real piece of writing. The first since those days in Sunbury. I—I got pretty excited over it. Oh, it didn't amount to much; just a play review they sent me out to do. But it was good. The real stuff. You can always tell, you know; it gets to coming with a rush, so you just can't write fast enough to keep up with it, and then you feel empty and happy afterward. That's the sure sign, I think—when it leaves you feeling that way."

There was a glow in his eye now, behind the glasses. And his color was rising. He lowered his eyes and fingered his cup.

Humphrey studied him. His intent frown deepened. He smoked and thought. Henry was telling him what he most feared to hear. At any moment the boy's genius might break out; and then the crazy little house of cards in which he thought he was hiding himself from the world would come tumbling in a breath about his ears.

A curious complication was Henry's strength. For he was strong, in his yielding, dreamy, elusive way. Humphrey felt none too sure that he could have endured what Henry had. The boy had never for a moment in his life surrendered his judgment to another. It had never been conscious resistance; it was simply that he couldn't. He didn't even know that that was what you did. Humphrey recalled with a faint twisted smile certain occasions, away back in the old Sunbury days, when Henry had tried to work for other men.

But he was speaking, talking out at last.

"Do you think, Hump—do you think a man can love more than one woman in his life?"

Humphrey pursed his lips. "Well, Hen, it's never happened to me but the one time. But it's possible. At least it seems to happen. I'm not sure that I know just what that word 'love' means. It may be a combination of emotions and needs that takes different forms at times. Perhaps a man can love two women for wholly differing reasons, or with different sides of his nature. I don't know. Or perhaps he is really a different being at different times in his life."

"I think that's what I was wondering."

"Is there some one now, Hen?"

"No, there isn't. But I've been puzzled. I started to make love to a girl last night. It seems to have had something to do with that piece of writing. Or it really began the night before. She's a very nice little girl—a working girl—but I don't love her. She's hardly even a definite person to me. She's just gentle, unobtrusive, very kind and comfortable."

What Baby Said

One on the Druggist

Little George (aged six) went to the drug store. Looking over the counter, he said: "I want a dose of castor oil." The druggist asked him if he liked castor oil. George said: "I hate it." "Well, I suppose you like soda." "Yes, I like soda all right."

So the druggist fixed up a nice foaming glass and gave it to him. When he drank it, he said: "Gee, that was fine, thank you." Then the druggist told him he had drank the castor oil in it. To which George replied: "But I wanted the castor oil for my mother!"

A Valentine for the Old World

By NELL BRINKLEY
Copyright, 1921, by International Feature Service, Inc.

A Pretty Girl for you!

A LONG time ago—while even the great-great-gran'mother of the Four Winds of Heaven was alive—and that's a long time ago, I'll whisper in a faery's ear!—Love came to earth one cold night in February when the snow still lay hard and diamondly on the ground. And he wore a postman's cap—and a great bag of love-letters over his shoulder, all sealed with scarlet and gold hearts: for even the homely cave-woman was getting Valentines on this certain day.

And he was looking for the World's house in the deeps of the farthest-away place, and he blew his whistle and banged on the door—bango!—bango!—and the World opened the top half of his spiked door and looked out at the tiny gentleman standing, smiling and winking, out in the cold scenery without his door. And he asked in his jolly way, "And what will YOU have?"

And his eyes were hopping out at the sight of something that Love had along with him, leading by a silken blue and silver ribbon and tied round about the middle with a great blue and silver bow, like a dainty package. And Love said, with a chirp in his voice, "I have a Valentine for you, old World. And the name of it is a PRETTY GIRL!"

And the old World has thought ever since that nobody ever gave anybody anything nicer and better to have than the pretty girl that Love gave the World for a Valentine long, long ago, before the great-great-gran'mother of the Four Winds of Heaven died!—NELL BRINKLEY.

The Adventures of Ann

By Hal Coffman

CHAPTER LXXVI

FRANK LANGDON was very impatient as he strode up and down the deck of the ship taking him to Rio. Mr. Chase, of Montgomery & Company, had commissioned him to find Ann and also to discover what it was that Gomez had alluded to in his wireless. A big steam yacht glided by the steamer on which Frank was a passenger. Frank idly looked at her, admiring the lines and thinking how nice it would be to own a boat like that. The big white yacht had "a bone in her teeth" and was evidently in a hurry to get to where she was headed. Suddenly her name glistened in the sunlight and Frank was able to read it easily. Patricia was what he saw in large gold letters on her bow.

At first the name meant nothing to him, for he was admiring the way she ploughed through the sea. The ship on which he was standing was no slow poke, but the big yacht went past her as if she were standing still. A fellow passenger standing by the rail exclaimed to Frank, "Isn't she a beauty? Evidently in a hurry, too, from the fuss she is kicking up."

Frank said nothing in reply, for he was busily thinking of the name Patricia in gold letters that glistened so brightly in the sunlight. It suddenly dawned upon him that he had seen that same yacht, or heard of her some place before. Then he remembered of what Ann had told him of her trip aboard this same yacht and it belonged to Harwood.

Why He Remained Home

Jacky Jones was late for Sunday school, and the minister inquired the cause.

"Please, sir," said Jacky, "I was going fishing and father wouldn't let me."

"Fishing on Sunday!" said the minister, severely. "Of course your father wouldn't let you—you've got the right kind of father, my boy!"

"Please, sir," put in Jacky, "father wouldn't let me go because he said there wasn't enough bait for two!"

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

THERE are people who revel in chatter, they know how each thing should be done, and they claim it's a trivial matter to handle the earth, stars and sun. They will prove how the cannibal nations could soon be made cheerful and sweet, and they'll show how their blood-curdling rations have saved them from being effete. Though you jabber in strange Hindustani, though you're master of Hebrew and Greek, though your knowledge of words is uncanny and in seven dead tongues you can speak, we have all learned that talk counts but lightly and we want in our serious moods not the parrots whose discourse is sprightly, but the fellow that's there with the goods! For we're mostly fed up on the spieler who dispenses vast stocks of hot air, we wish he would call a four-wheeler and go far away—anywhere. And the thing which we always have needed is not talk coming down in great floods, but the fellow whose few words are heeded, the one that is there with the goods. Not the orator, proud and commanding, not the man with the loftiest brow, for today all our laurels we're handing to the person who really knows how.

The Engineer's Test

They are so close in some parts of Scotland that the lakes can't get enough water, and have to go dry.

A visitor tells the story of a Scotsman, a prospective marine engineer, who was being examined by the captain.

The skipper asked a number of difficult questions in order to confuse the applicant, but the latter was always ready with an answer.

Finally in a tone of deepest concern the captain asked:

"Now, suppose the water in your injector was working properly, your boiler check was not stuck, or your pipes clogged, but you were not getting any water in your boilers, what would you do?"

The engineer looked puzzled for a moment, unable fully to grasp the situation; then, with a knowing smile on his face, he answered:

"I'd go up on deck and see whether there was any water in the lake."

"You'll do," said the captain.

PETER had tipped the waiter generously. Perhaps that was why, at a sign from Theo, he opened the door quickly for the pair to leave the restaurant.

Sheldon had struggled to his feet. It was more evident than before that he was drunk.

"Damn you!" he exclaimed, staggering toward the door.

But Theo Dale and her companion were already in the street. So swiftly that he had hardly realized what she was doing, the girl had hurried Peter from the scene of the quarrel.

"The man is as drunk as a fool! Let him alone!" she had commanded.

"But," Peter protested, "he tried to take hold of you"——

She interrupted him. "Don't be an idiot! He did not touch me. You stopped him before he got a chance, Pete."

She did not speak again until she and her escort were in a cab and rolling down toward Tompkins Square. Both windows of the equipage were open and the cold air was grateful upon the man's heated face.

With a sigh he removed his hat. "I wish I had killed him!" he muttered.

Theodora Dale laid a firm hand on his hot and trembling one.

"Pete," she said, "there's something wrong tonight. You need not tell me what it is—but you are not yourself. In the first place, you have had too much to drink. In the second place—you are worried."

"I have enough to worry me!" he declared, trying to take her hand in his.

To the Point

But she drew away from him. "I don't guess you have any more kicks coming to you than the rest of us have. Anyway, if so, it's your own fault."

"My own fault?" he echoed.

"Yes—your own fault. If ever any man had a dandy start, you're it. Your folks have money and could get you a good job—if you wanted to work. But, Pete, you don't."

"Good Lord!" he exclaimed. "Can't even you trust me when I say that I'm going to settle down at some job soon?"

"I'll trust you when you do it," she said gravely. "I'm sorry I messed things up by going with you tonight. I got just what was coming to me."

"What do you mean?"

"I don't want to be horrid and hurt your feelings—after you've taken me to supper and all. But, Pete—did you really make the money you took me out with?"

"Do you doubt my word?" he demanded angrily.

"Did you?" she insisted.

"I earned it all right," he said sullenly.

"By work?" she asked.

"See here!" he exclaimed. "If this is a catechism, let me know, and I'll try to learn the answers!"

"Not—it's not a catechism—and I'm not a Sunday school teacher! And what's more—I am aware that it's none of my business—if that's the idea that you're trying to get across to me! Well, you've got it across all right—and it's landed fair and square.

"But it's not the only idea that's landed. Another one that I have got at last is that there was something fishy about what you told me tonight.

"When I made a bargain about going out with you when you earned the money to take me—I meant earned it by work. That was none of my business, either, of course. But you let me think it was—please remember!"

When he parted from her at the door of her boarding house he dismissed the cab.

"I want to come in and have a talk with you," he begged.

"If you were sane and sober, Peter, you would not propose that at this hour," she said. "What's more, I do not care to have you come in."

"When may I have a talk with you?" he pleaded.

She hesitated, standing on the step above him and looking down at him.

When she spoke her lips twitched, but her voice did not quiver.

"When you have a regular, working job, Pete—not till then!"

After which she ran up the steps and into the house.

CHAPTER XXIV.—(Continued)

HE had hardly resumed his seat when Everett Constable got up again. He remarked, somewhat unsteadily, that to prolong the controversy would be useless and painful to all concerned, and he infinitely regretted the necessity of putting his suggestion that the rector resign in the form of a resolution. . . . The vote was taken. Six men raised their hands in favor of his resignation — Nelson Langmaid among them; two, Asa Waring and Philip Goodrich, were against it. After announcing the result, Hodder rose.

"For the reason I have stated, gentlemen, I decline to resign," he said. "I stand upon my canonical rights."

Francis Ferguson arose, his voice actually trembling with anger. There is something uncanny in the passion of a man whose life has been ordered by the inexorable rules of commerce, who has been wont to decide all questions from the standpoint of dollars and cents. If one of his own wax models had suddenly become animated, the effect could not have been more startling.

In the course of this discussion, he declared, Mr. Hodder had seen fit to make grave and in his opinion unwarranted charges concerning the lives of some, if not all, of the gentlemen who sat here. It surprised him that these remarks had not been resented, but he praised a Christian forbearance on the part of his colleagues which he was unable to achieve. He had no doubt that their object had been to spare Mr. Hodder's feelings as much as possible, but Mr. Hodder had shown no disposition to spare their own. He had outraged them. Mr. Ferguson thought,—wantonly so. He had made these preposterous and unchristian charges an excuse for his determination to remain in a position where his usefulness had ceased.

No one, unfortunately, was perfect in this life,—not even Mr. Hodder. He, Francis Ferguson, was far from claiming to be so. But he believed that this arraignment of the men who stood highest in the city for decency, law and order, who supported the church, who revered its doctrines, who tried to live Christian lives, who gave their time and their money freely to it and to charities—that this arraignment was an arrogant accusation and affront to be repudiated. He demanded that Mr. Hodder be definite. If he had any charges to make, let him make them here and now.

The consternation, the horror which succeeded such a stupid and unexpected tactical blunder on the part of the usually astute Mr. Ferguson were felt rather than visually discerned. The atmosphere might have been described as panicky. Asa Waring and Phil Goodrich smiled as Wallis Plimpton, after a moment's hush, scrambled to his feet, his face pale, his customary easiness and nonchalance now the result of an obvious effort. He, too, tried to smile, but swallowed instead as he remembered his property in Dalton street. . . . Nelson Langmaid smiled, in spite of himself. . . . Mr. Plimpton implored his fellow members not to bring personalities into the debate, and he was aware all the while of the curious, pitying expression of the rector. He breathed a sigh of relief at the opening words of Hodder, who followed him.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I have no intention of being personal, even by unanimous consent. But if Mr. Ferguson will come to me after the meeting I shall have not the least objection to discussing this matter with him in so far as he himself is concerned. I can only assure you now that I have not spoken without warrant."

There was, oddly enough, no acceptance of this offer by Mr. Ferguson. Another silence ensued, broken at last, by a voice for which they had all been unconsciously waiting; a voice which, though unemotional, cold, and matter-of-fact, was nevertheless commanding, and long accustomed to speak with an overwhelming authority. Eldon Parr did not rise.

Rules Governing Movie Player Identity Test

The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser's new Moving Picture Players' Identification Test is a test of skill and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

Two hundred and nineteen cash awards will be given by these two newspapers to their readers who submit the largest percentage of correct identifications to the 120 pictures to be published in these two newspapers.

All employes of the Boston American, the Boston Sunday Advertiser, and their families, and all moving picture players and persons connected with the moving picture industry are absolutely barred from participating in the awards.

The Test will consist of 120 pictures of favorite moving picture players, to be printed two each day, in the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, first picture Sunday, December 19, 1920.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running, or which shall be run by the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser will not debar anyone from entering this Test.

Every participant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set of pictures, but each set must contain only ONE identification to each picture, and no participant shall be entitled to more than one award, and not more than one award shall be given in any one family.

Each and every identification must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American or Boston Sunday Advertiser or on a page of some book form by itself, accompanied either by the picture furnished by the Boston American or Boston Sunday Advertiser, or a pen or pencil copy thereof, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the participant on each identification blank.

Do not send your identification in "list" form, i. e., do not write identifications under one another on a piece of paper.

In case there are no complete sets of correct identifications, awards will be given to the persons submitting the largest percentage of correct identifications.

In case of a tie awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact accuracy in mailing, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way, the tied participants will receive similar awards.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their identifications before the end of the Test, as any sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. KEEP your identifications from day to day and at the end of the Test arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together at one time.

Time will not be a factor in making the awards. The first identifications sent in after the Test closes will stand no better than the last submitted.

All identifications must be delivered to the Boston American Movie Test Headquarters, at No. 80 Summer street, Boston 6, Mass., either by mail or in person within specified time limit, which will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing identifications must be legibly addressed as follows: "Movie Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 6, Mass., P. O. Box 239," and each envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender legibly written or stamped on the upper left-hand corner.

As all identifications will contain written or printed matter, if mailed, it is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at postal letter rates, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first class matter. The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser reserve the right to refuse to consider any sets of identifications on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

Participants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the Movie Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 6, Mass. Questions will be answered, as far as possible, through the columns of the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser. "LOVE FIFTEEN!"—This convertible sport costume of white crepe mohair trimmed with black, is going to be proper for tennis, etc., next Summer. "Love fifteen?" Certainly, why not?

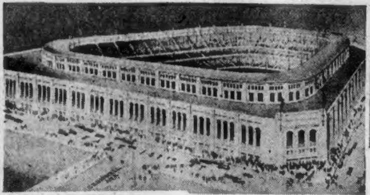
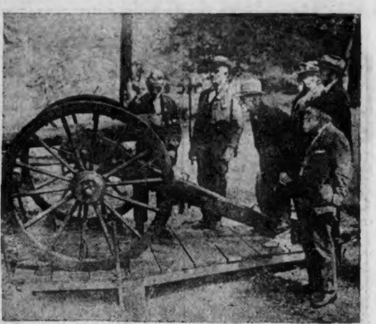
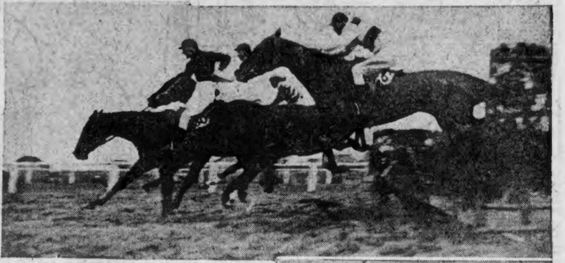
PROFITEERS IN JAIL—Don't get excited, it's only an ad for a big show sale at a Paris shop. The proprietor opened up his new store offering shoes at 50 per cent. under the market prices and rigged up this front to attract attention. The sign says, "We do not sell shoes, we give them away." Food and shoe profiteers are pictured in jail. Business rushing. (c) K. & H.



NEW YANK HOME—How the baseball grounds of the N. Y. American League Club will look when completed in 1923. The park will the the country's finest and will seat 75,000. (Int.)

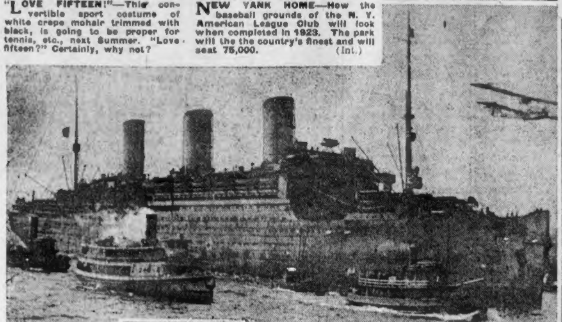


THEM WAS THE PISTOLS, BOYS—Some of the "old boys," followers of Lee, visit Fort Walker, Georgia, and look over some of the old guns used in the Civil War. "Darned sight better shooters than some 'o those new fangled guns, yessir." (U. & U.)



GALROY IS BEATEN—The famous English horse, bought as a two-year-old for 10,000 guineas, leads in the Berkshire hurdle over the final hurdle but finishes third. San Pitricio (in foreground), was the winner of the race. (c) U. & U.

RACING AUTO OF 1895—This "speedster" was not only one of Chicago's first "horseless carriages," but was one of the entries in the famous 50-mile race of 1895. It could attain as much speed as a walking man, which was going some in those days. (Int.)



WHERE OUR MONEY GOES—When they turned the Leviathan (formerly the Vaterland) into a transport they junked her equipment. Now it costs us $780,000 a year while she lays idle. (c) U. & U.

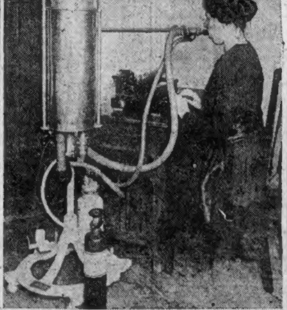
AID THEIR COUNTRY PEOPLE—Byrn Mawr students gave a Chinese dinner to aid the fund for starving China. The two Chinese girls who prepared the food are students of the college. (c) U. & U.

WANT TO BUY A BABY?—Chinese mothers in the famine area of that country are selling their babies for a few pennies so that the babies will be saved from starvation. The photograph shows an unfortunate mother with two babies for sale. Conditions in the stricken districts of China are said to be worse than in any known previous famine. (Int.)

MUD FOR BEAUTY—Having a massage with mud made from lava thrown out by volcanoes. The lady has not an eyeful. That's just a piece of cotton to keep the lava from getting in her eye. (c) K. & H.

WANT SOME EXERCISE?—Try this for a week. We have tried it once and the fellow on the other end of the saw told us he didn't mind our taking a ride on the saw but he did object to us dragging our feet. There are 250 cords of wood to be cut in one of the Brooklyn parks and only two men answered the park commissioners' call for volunteers. (c) U. & U.

COMING CHAMPION—Kenneth Bourne of Long Island is one of the most promising of the "kid" golfers spending the Winter months at the Augusta (Georgia) Country Club. (c) Underwood & Underwood.



HOW MUCH OXYGEN DO YOU NEED?—Research work at the Teachers' College, N. Y., is being carried out to determine the amount of oxygen used by people in different vocations. The girl running the typewriter has a respiratory apparatus which she is breathing through. We vote in favor of trying these out on Congress for one entire session. (c) K. & H.

AMERICAN PASSION PLAY—"Veronica's Veil," the spectacular Biblical production made its debut yesterday at St. Joseph's Auditorium, Hoboken. The photograph is of Louise Faurise as "A Virgin." (Int.)

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to prepare, and saves you about $2.

Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for three times the money. It is pure, good and tastes very pleasant.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.—Advertisement.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

M. Severin-Mars as Napoleon Bonaparte.

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

THE French society, "Art et Cinematographie," has been filming the high-lights of French history. They have just finished a picture called "L'Agonie des Aigles," giving the history of Napoleon Bonaparte. This is the first print of a scene in this film to reach America.

Bernard Descamps directed the production and the life of Napoleon as written by Georges D'Estarbes was used as a source of information. Some time ago artists, historians, writers and journalists gathered at Fontainebleau, where in the "Cheval Blanc" courtyard scenes of Napoleon's farewell were acted before the camera. The historic flags, arms, costumes and uniforms were borrowed from the Paris museum.

In the picture Napoleon is reviewing, probably for the last time, his imperial guard at Fontainebleau. He is reading a petition that one of his grenadiers has given him.

STARS AND THEIR SALARIES.

WHEN Samuel Goldwyn came East last week he said that one of the significant points of the movie outlook for the coming year is the fact that the stars' salaries will drop. With the end of the war came lowered prices and lowered salaries in shops, factories and other industries, but the movie stars, according to report, were still getting from two to five thousand a week. To the question whether a picture depends on its star for success, she replies that her name is what draws the crowd.

This problem will be put to the test now that the producers have taken a stand.

The studios are cutting down their expenses right and left by making fewer and better pictures. They have cut down their forces and have thrown 1,500 employes out of work in the East and about 5,000 on the West Coast.

Many of our big stars have suddenly found themselves without contracts and don't know why. When their contracts expired they were left with nothing to do. Expecting another to be offered them almost immediately, they have waited—and are still waiting.

Mae Murray is among those who are "between pictures." She declares that if the producers won't give her the salary she asks she will form her own company and pay her own salary. Billie Burke is spending all her time now at her home, Berkely rest, on the Hudson, because no company will pay her what she wants. Others in the same state are Dorothy Dalton, Emily Stevens, Virginia Pearson, Lillian Gish, Emmy Wehlen, Claire Whitney and Lillian Walker.

The stars don't feel that the producers can keep the stand they have taken. Mae Murray says:

"The producers and their backers are making a big mistake. Stars are paid in the ratio of their box office drawing power."

Dorothy Gish, who directed her sister, Lillian, in a picture she made for a concern which recently went bankrupt, says:

"The public has its favorites and will demand them."

Emily Stevens says:

"I think motion picture stars should get higher salaries than they do on the stage because they work longer and harder. There is nothing unjust about their present salaries."

The tremendous sums paid yearly to movie stars have been bewildering. Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and William Hart have been our highest paid players. They are said to average about $1,000,000 a year. A few years ago Mary jumped from a $100,000 contract to a $500,000 one.

It will develop, undoubtedly, into a happy medium, where star, producer, author and director will co-operate to make good pictures.

ANOTHER WILD WEST HERO.

AND now a new star and western hero comes up smiling. Wheeler Oakman has been promoted to the rank of a star by Irving Lesser, who is forming his own producing company and who was so impressed by Oakman's Beach's novel, "The Spoilers," and in "Outside the Law," which he made with his wife, Priscilla Dean. These Lesser-Oakman films will be a series of five-reel "westerns," and will be called the "Broncho Kid" pictures. That was what Oakman was called in "The Spoilers."

He will have his own studios, which will be among the largest in Hollywood and will start production as soon as the buildings are finished.

BACK TO THE THRILLERS

THE films are going back to the old-time favorites, the detective-story thrillers. Over a thousand Nick Carter stories are being produced by Broadwell at the Mastercraft studios in Medford, and now arrangements are being made for eighteen of Maurice Leblanc's Arsene Lupin stories to be made by Wedgwood Nowell in Los Angeles.

Nowell is at present being starred as Arsene Lupin in the Robertson-Cole production of "813," which is meeting great favor everywhere. In New York recently Nowell completed arrangements with a French producer to film the rest of the stories as well as twenty Raffles stories by E. W. Hornung. The price paid was $20,000 for each story.

SNAP SHOTS

TOM MOORE'S first appearance in the movies was in a story written by himself and Stuart Holmes. Now both Moore and Holmes are at the Goldwyn West Coast studios making pictures and spend their time between scenes laughing over the days when they sat up until three in the morning to write their parts.

REV. HENRY ROSE'S sermon on "The Inside of the Cup" was such a success that last Sunday he preached on David Wark Griffith's "Way Down East," illustrated by more than a hundred slides taken from the film.

MOLLY MALONE says that if it weren't for an accident she would be a designer of scenery now instead of an actress. She was visiting friends in Los Angeles and for a lark they went into a picture as "extras." When the films were developed the director looked her up and offered her a job playing small roles. She gave up all thought of designing without a moment's hesitation and hasn't thought of it since.

LEROY SCOTT says there's more than one way of "getting your hand in" in the movies. First you write a story, as for instance, "The Night Rose," which he wrote for Goldwyn, then you keep everybody posted as to what good-looking hands you have. After an inspection of the hands of every man on the set the other day when a close-up of the hands of the leading man's was wanted, Scott's were chosen for the ordeal.

CONSTANCE BINNEY has refused an offer to star in a stage play of Rachel Crothers' next season. She will continue in pictures and give her whole time to them, instead of doubling from the stage, as she did last year when she played "39 East."

STANDARDS OF EXCELLENCE

Every one has a standard of some kind. The higher the standard set the greater effort required to attain and maintain it.

With this idea in mind the Waltham Chemical Co. started to manufacture powders to exterminate household pests such as rats, mice, cockroaches, water bugs, bedbugs, ants, fleas, lice, etc., until eleven different powder formulas, each the very best that could be compounded, were devised. That high standard set then has been consistently maintained ever since, and today these powders, sold under the name of "Martin's Powders" for Household Pests are the standard throughout New England.

Sold by all drug and department stores for 40c and $1.20 per can, 55c and $1.35 by mail. Eleven different powders. Name kind when ordering. All registered in Maine.

More Millions Are Sought by Lighting Companies

The gas and electric light companies of Massachusetts have asked the Legislature for permission to capitalize their premiums.

This is the most reactionary proposal which has yet been presented to this Legislature, already noteworthy for the reactionary character of the schemes which have come before it.

If it were not for well-known general conditions, we should feel constrained to believe that the leaders of reaction had an unusual confidence in Governor Cox. But Massachusetts is not peculiar in these respects. The leaders of reaction throughout the country believe that now is the flood tide of their opportunity, and are trying desperately to ride it. Their success in the passage of the Esch-Cummins law, which gave millions to the railroads when they were returned to their stock-speculator control, and their success against organized labor, destroying in two years the legal progress which labor has made in two generations of struggle, has emboldened the big business interests to believe that this is their time, and that their opportunity is limited only by their courage. Some of the more prosperous railroads are asking the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to do exactly the thing which Mr. Burdett asks on behalf of the gas and electric light companies. But the railroads are a little more modest, for, as little as there is to say for their proposal that their surplus should be capitalized, there is more to be said in defence of it than there is to be said for the proposal that the premiums of our public utilities be capitalized.

A premium in Massachusetts in this case is the difference between the market value and the par value of the capital stock of a public service corporation which has been issued. Or to put it another way, if the Boston Edison Electric Illuminating Company issues some of its capital stock at a par value of a million dollars, under our Massachusetts law it is not allowed to sell that stock for the par value, but must sell it for whatever price above the par value the Public Utilities Department approves. Now suppose that the par value of a share of Edison stock is $100, but the market value of the stock is $200 a share. Then the amount which the company would receive for the sale of that million par value would be $2,000,000, and the difference between the million of par and the million of market value would be a million dollars, and that million is called the premium. We believe that the premiums of the Boston Edison Electric Illuminating Company amount to about $18,000,000. This company collects from the people of the metropolitan district about 12 per cent. on its capital stock. Now if it were allowed to capitalize its premiums and to earn 12 per cent. on them the people of Boston would have their cost of living increased each year by an amount equal to about 12 per cent. of $18,000,000, or something over $2,000,000 on this transaction alone. Then there is the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, and the gas and electric light companies in every city and town in the State—hungry for these premiums.

These are the ways by which the cost of living is increased, and the working man is blamed for it.

Five or six years ago we should be seriously alarmed at the character of the bills which are now before the Legislature reflecting the black reaction through which we have passed and for which President Wilson's betrayal of American liberals is primarily responsible. But today we have no fear of any of them, for democracy in Massachusetts, and the rights of the average man, are protected against these raids from the special interests by the Initiative and the Referendum.

Jew Baiting Old Sport of Special Privilege

John Spargo, speaking the other night in Roxbury on the anti-Jewish campaign, said one thing which is true and worth repeating: "Everywhere throughout the centuries anti-Semitism, when it has appeared has been closely intertwined with every other corrupt reactionary, and brutalizing force."

This is so. Wherever you find Jew baiting you will find some powerful minority enjoying unjust privileges which the mass of the people are beginning to question and challenge, and for which the privileged class is beginning to entertain serious fears. Almost always at such a juncture, when it is possible, this privileged class raises a hue and cry against the Jews, whether it was in the middle ages when the exactions of the kings and barons were blamed on the Jewish money lenders and the court playwrights wrote their "Merchants of Venice," or in modern times when a corrupt and treasonable French military cabal had to have their Dreyfus; or when the Czar and his drunken grand dukes, the corruption of whose government, keeping the Russian people in ignorance, poverty and misery, had to have the Jews to blame, to divert from themselves the wrath of an ignorant population; or today, when the Polish landlords, clinging to an economic system, which has been destroyed by the people all around them, find it necessary to keep the Polish masses oscillating between the fierce hatred against Russia and against the Polish Jews. This accounts largely for the war against Russia.

That these Jewish outbreaks are not spontaneous and natural, because based upon real grievances, is proved by the fact that wherever there is no reactionary, privilege possessing class, there is no Jew baiting. Russian people under the Czar were the most shameless in the world in their Jewish pogroms. Since the Czar and all his satellites, and the great landowners who held under him, and who taxed the last penny from the peasant, to spend it in debauchery in Paris, have been wiped out, not only have Jewish pogroms ceased in Russia and the Jews been given civil and political privileges, but their leadership has been acknowledged and many of them occupy places of [illegible] in the Russian Government, and nearly all of them support it.

Nor are the Jews alone the victim [illegible] practice, by reactionaries who are enjoying special privileges which are in the nature of stolen goods, of raising a cry against another race in the nature of the thief's cry, of "Stop thief." The Christians, especially, can be with little grace, complacent with the modern Jew baiting. Christians suffered in the early days beginning with Jesus himself more than the Jews at the hands of those who would keep the population occupied with other things than their economic condition.

More Truth Than Poetry

Foolish Hopes

By S. E. KISER

THE knowledge that we need is won
  Through lessons that are hard to learn;
Of all our pleasures there is none
  As precious as the one we earn,
But, even so, our wishes turn
  As folly shapes them, more or less;
We murmur at prolonged delays
That keep us from enjoying praise;
  Our hopes are set on quick success.

WE know there can be little gain
  In choosing paths that promise ease,
But still we shun the shock and strain
  Of big tasks, mastered by degrees;
We know that, as with men, the trees
  That spring up quickly from the earth,
Without the struggles which, at length,
Are registered in size and strength,
  Have brittle grain and little worth.

THE truth is told—as old as Time—
  And yet we put our books aside;
We have the wish to be sublime,
  And wait for luck to feed our pride;
We praise our Lincoln, who defied
  The gods of chance, and wrung from Fate,
The favor dauntless effort brings;
But still we turn to easy things,
  And hope for grandeur soon or late.

A QUESTION OF PROCEDURE

Two women have been elected judges in Ohio. Will they wear gowns, or do the polite thing, and put on trousers?

MIXED PLEASURE

"I suppose you are getting a great deal of enjoyment out of your new automobile."

"Yes," she replied. "Out of it is right. My husband insists on driving it himself."

THINK, BROTHERS, THINK!

Taxes, taxes everywhere!
It's awful, don't you think?
Next thing, unless we have a care,
They'll tax us when we wink.

Mr. B. Baer

ELASTICITY.

AFTER the politicians get through snapping up the transit facilities, the only part of the subway left in the public's hands will be the straps.

THEY are going to take away our per capita share in subway crushes and panics. They don't want a poor boy to have no fun at all.

THAT elastic fare squib is a pallbearer laugh. When it gets up to eight cents, it will be as elastic as concrete, resilient as a poker and will bounce right back like an anvil dropped in a swamp.

THANKS to the subway seating facilities, there is no chance of taking New York by surprise. We are always on our feet.

ELASTICITY means the power of returning to normal shape after being stretched, twisted, battered and pounded out of all resemblance to anything. Why not make our nickels out of rubber and pay 'em off in beer bottle washers? Nobody is using 'em any more.

IF you get on the subway without any money, let the guard take your elastic Police and Fireman's suspenders and give you two garters change.

IF a burglar holds you up on the boulevard, give him the elastic rubber band off your bankroll and send him on his way rejoicing. Ain't much difference between that and dangling off a strap, except the boulevard boy makes you put both hands up.

THEY'LL vote on it this way. The Grab Boys will get on a Brooklyn local when everybody is hanging on a strap.

THEY will chant: "Everybody in favor of eight cents, raise one hand."

THEN they count the straps and the elastic fare is passed like a flivver in the Vanderbilt Cup race.

AND after it's stretched up to an octave of pennies, try to pull it back.

By K. C. B.

DEAR Mr. K. C. B.—I have had a quarrel with a young man to whom I am engaged, and as you are the innocent cause, won't you please help me in my trouble?

I cut out all your articles, and when this young man calls I read them to him. Also on numerous occasions I sing your praises. I did this last night and he became very angry and said if the editor prohibited you from writing about yourself there would be only blank space under your heading.

I cried a little and told him I would tell you what he said, and he laughed and said it would be worth $25 to me as a present if I could put it over.

Will you please help me? HOPE I. WYNN.

MY DEAR Hope.
IF THAT young man.
HAS $25.
AND YOU can get it.
I'M FOR you.
AND I hope you get it.
AND AT that.
MAYBE HE'S right.
FOR I'M very sure.
IF THE editor.
SHOULD SAY to me.
THAT IN the future.
I SHOULD cease to write.
ABOUT MYSELF.
THAT I'D be lost.
AND TELL him, Hope.
THAT THE trouble is.
THAT I must write.
ON EVERY day.
YEAR AFTER year.
AND FOR the reason.
I CAN'T see things.
THROUGH OTHER eyes.
THAN JUST my own.
I THEN must write.
OF WHAT I see.
AND WHAT I feel.
AND, ANYWAY, Hope.
IF I were you.
I'D BE very careful.
ABOUT MARRYING a guy.
WHO'S GOING to get sore.
ABOUT SOME old geezer.
HE'S NEVER seen.
BUT WHATEVER you do.
GRAB THE twenty-five.

I THANK you.

Moros Want to Stay Under Our Flag

By Edith Davids

MANILA, P. I., Dec., 1920.

THE Sultan of Sulu held court on the morning of my visit to the palace. When he heard that I was an American he interrupted the proceedings to come down off the dais. The Sultan shook hands with me, remarking cordially that he liked Americans.

The first attempt in the history of the world to give popular education to the masses of Mohammedan womanhood is being made by the United States in the Sultanate of Sulu. I had come to this southern-most archipelago of the Philippines to see with my own eyes the results.

The Sultan was clad in white, his swarthy countenance surmounted by the red fez of the Mussulman. For his subjects, the Moros of Sulu Land, adhere to the Koran and polygamy. There are nearly a million of them. Small and strong and slight, their dark features, beneath fez or turban, wear a firce look. Mouths crimsoned by betel-nut chewing and teeth blackened with bujo produce a barbarous aspect.

Plainsmen wear skirt-like trousers, violet in color, vivid green, magenta or rose, and bolero jackets ornamented by many brass buttons. Hillmen encase their limbs in trousers skin-tight to the ankle, lacing tightly about their waists bright sashes of native-woven silks, bolo thrust through the knot.

A virile race, the Moros look one straight in the eye. Through three centuries they maintained with their murderous boloes the Arabic civilization to be the equal of that of the Spaniards. Utterly devoid of fear, they have never been conquered.

Pirates and slave traders, the Moros have from the beginning shown marked respect for the American straight talk and square deal. Many are loyal to the United States, although they had never laid down arms against Spain and have always been bitter racial and religious foes of the Filipinos.

The Sultan's palace stands within the small walled city of Jolo. The metropolis of the Sultanate is set about with great riches of tropical forests and sea wealth of pearls; it is the centre for the pearling fleet of the Sulu and Celebes seas. I was conducted to an upper room of the palace.

Dayang-Dayang Hadji Piandao Salim Kiram, Princess royal of Sulu, received me. The Princess is the daughter-by-adoption of the Sultan, who has no children, and the daughter of his brother.

The Sultan's last, lately-acquired wife, a girl scarcely out of childhood, in a corridor beyond, trailed like a bird of paradise. Others of the royal spouses glimpsed themselves. Dato Rajah Muda Moahl Washid, the heir-presumptive, came in and sat down. We were joined by several other exalted personages.

"Do you approve education for women?" The Dayang-Dayang, for answer, enthusiastically showed two photographs.

One pictured an eighteen-year-old in the white dress of a sweet girl graduate.

"Princess Tarhata Kiram—my cousin," she said through an interpreter. "I am educating her in the University of Illinois."

The other portrayed a royal Moro youth. "Hadji Jakaria Abu Bakr—also my cousin," commented the Dayang-Dayang. "I have dispatched him by the last steamer to study agriculture in America."

The Princess, who spoke a little English, declared herself an ardent advocate of suffrage for women in the Philippines. "The difficulty would be," she deplored, "that many Moro women could not sign their names.

"We Moros warmly admire American women" affirmed Her Highness, adding with a feminine touch, "and their appearence!"

The mooted question of independence for the Philippine Islands came up. One of the high ranking Moros present expressed intense opposition. Considering the well-known warlike character of the Moros, written during three hundred years in blood, the words can hardly be considered idle remarks:

"If the United States gives independence to the Filipinos, we Moros want to separate from them. The Moros will not be subject to the Filipinos. The Filipino people don't know what form of independence they want. The Moro people know they don't want independence. The Moros desire to continue under the American flag."

The Spectator

MEMORABLE SPEECHES

THERE are some sayings that have permanently enriched our speech.

They are the indestructible jewels of literature.

They have so impressed themselves upon the race that they have become a part of the furniture of all minds; more than that, you might call them eternal councillors in the court of public opinion.

Some of these it may be interesting to note.

Every schoolboy knows the fine words of Patrick Henry, "Give me liberty or give me death!" And Lincoln's phrase, "A government of the people, by the people and for the people." Though both of these sayings had been made before, yet these two gave them their lasting fame by linking them to great occasions.

One of the most famous sentences, characteristic in its sonorous style and grandiose construction of its author, the great Samuel Johnson, the ponderous magnate of English letters, is the following sentence with which he opens his story of Rasselas:

> "Ye who listen with credulity to the whispers of fancy, and pursue with eagerness the phantoms of hope, who expect that age will perform the promise of youth, and that the deficiencies of the present day will be supplied by the morrow—attend to the history of Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia."

George Washington's saying has been of late much argued:

> "'Tis our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world."

Of the other Presidents, Grover Cleveland coined the phrase "innocuous desuetude"; Roosevelt's famous word was the "strenuous life," to which may be added Lincoln's "with malice toward none, with charity to all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right"; Grant's "Let us have peace!" Jefferson's "We hold these truths to be self-evident—that all men are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," and Wilson's "to make the world safe for democracy."

Such reflections as these owe what charm they may possess to their desultory character, so that I here jot down such other great sayings as come to mind.

Voltaire's for instance, "If there were no God it would be necessary to invent one."

And another saying of his, often imputed to Talleyrand, "Men employ speech only to conceal their thoughts."

It was Le Sage who wrote, "Facts are stubborn things."

The clever and cynic La Rochefoucald once said a thing so sharp and true it could not be forgotten, yet só ugly that he afterwards tried to suppress it, but could not: "In the adversity of our best friends we often find something that is not exactly displeasing."

It was Cervantes, the Spaniard, who wrote, "Now, blessings on the man that first invented sleep!" and also the aphorism, "Rome was not built in a day."

The witty Rabelais left a paper sealed up, wherein were found three articles of his last will: "I owe much; I have nothing; I give the rest to the poor."

And it was he who invented many sayings that have defied time, such as "Robbing Peter to pay Paul," "looking a gift horse in the mouth," "feathering well one's nest" and "hitting the nail on the head."

It is Villon who asked the immortal question, "where are the snows of yesteryear?" and Dante who gave the inscription over the gates of Hell, "Abandon hope, all ye who enter here!"

Lord Macaulay was a noted coiner of phrases. A typical sentence of his refers to a cult that we have still with us today—those who seek notoriety by their smartness and their pessimism. "From the poetry of Lord Byron," says Macaulay, "they drew a system of ethics compounded of misanthropy and voluptuousness—a system in which the two great commandments were to hate your neighbors and to love your neighbor's wife."

And one of the most stately and beautiful passages that comes to my mind in these recollections is that remarkable passage in which Richard Hooker, known as "the Judicious Hooker," describes Law:

> "Of Law there can be no less acknowledged than that her seat is the bosom of God, her voice the harmony of the world. All things in heaven and earth do her homage—the very least as feeling her care, and the greatest as not exempt from her power."
